> Malcolms Cross, near Alnwick Castle
> The memorial cross was erected by the Duchess of Northumberland in 1774 in memory of King Malcolm III (Canmore) of Scotland who was killed on or near this spot while besieging Alnwick Castle in 1093

Legend has it that the castle's Steward rode up to the Scottish king to surrender the keys of the castle in the time-honoured tradition of passing them over on the end of his lance. However, once within arm's range of the king, he decided to use his lance to greater effect by treacherously slaying him on the spot.

Shoreditch is a district in the East End of London that forms the southern part of the London Borough of Hackney; neighbouring parts of Tower Hamlets are sometimes also perceived as part of the area

In the 16th century, Shoreditch was an important centre of the Elizabethan Theatre, and it has been an important entertainment centre since that time

Today, it hosts many pubs, bars and nightclubs in the most commercial areas that lie closest to the city of London along the A10 Road, with the rest mostly residential

Barnstable is today both a town and a county in Massachusetts, consisting of the southern Cape Cod Bay and the "hook" with the associated islands; it's name is from the town of "Barnstaple" which is in Devon, England

Barnstable is an old-English spelling, 1st recorded in the 10th century; it is believed to have been derived from the Old English "bearde" (meaning "battle-axe") and "stapol" meaning "pillar" which refers to a post to mark a religious meeting place

The area was first explored by Bartholomew Gosnold in 1602 & was one of the first towns to be settled in The Plymouth Colony in 1638; it was incorporated on September 4, 1639

The early settlers were farmers, led by the Reverend Joseph Hull who became the founder of the town of Barnstable. A memorial tablet was dedicated to him on the 300th anniversary of the town's founding in 1939, marking the site of his home; the rock from which he preached still stands along the nearby highway

The county is visible at:

Bavaria was the Kingdom of Bavaria, a German state that succeeded the former Electorate of Bavaria in 1805 and continued to exist until 1918

The Bavarian Elector Maximilian IV Joseph of the House of Wittelsbach became the first King of Bavaria in 1805 as Maximilian I Joseph. The crown would go on being held by the Wittelsbachs until the kingdom came to an end in 1918. Most of Bavaria's present-day borders were established after 1814 with the Treaty of Paris, in which Bavaria ceded Tyrol and Vorarlberg to the Austrian Empire while receiving Aschaffenburg and Würzburg

With the unification of Germany into the German Empire in 1871, the kingdom became a federal state of the new Empire and was second in size, power, and wealth only to the leading state, the Kingdom of Prussia. In 1918, Bavaria became a republic, and the kingdom was thus succeeded by the current Free State of Bavaria

Bayreuth is a town on the Red Main river in Bavaria, Germany and is believed to have been founded by the Counts of Andechs around the mid-12th century; it was first mentioned in 1194 as "Baierrute" in a document by Bishop Otto II of Bamberg-the syllable "-rute" may have meant "Rodung" ("a clearing"), whilst "Baier-" would have indicated "immigrants from the Bavarian region"

Villages were later merged into Bayreuth: Seulbitz (in 1035 as the royal Salian estate of Silewize in a document by Emperor Conrad II) and St. Johannis (possibly 1149 as Altentrebgast). Even the district of Altstadt (formerly Altenstadt) west of the town centre must be older than the town of Bayreuth itself. Even older traces of human presence were found in the hamlets of Meyernberg: pieces of pottery and wooden crockery were dated to the 9th century based on their decoration

While Bayreuth was previously (1199) referred to as a "villa" ("village"), the term "civitas" ("town") appeared for the first time in a document published in 1231. One can therefore assume that Bayreuth was awarded its town charter between 1200 and 1230. The town was ruled until 1248 by the counts of Andechs-Merania. After they died out in 1260 the burgraves of Nuremberg from the House of Hohenzollern took over the inheritance

As early as 1361 Emperor Charles IV conferred on Burgrave Frederick V the right to mint coins for the towns of Bayreuth and Kulmbach

In 1398 Bayreuth was partitioned from Nuremberg, becoming the Principality of Bayreuth (German: "Fürstentum Bayreuth"). Until 1604, however, the princely residence and the centre of the territory was the castle of Plassenburg in Kulmbach and as such the territory was officially known as the Principality of Kulmbach. The town of Bayreuth developed slowly and was affected time and again by disasters

Bayreuth was first published on a map in 1421

In February 1430, the Hussites devastated Bayreuth and the town hall and churches were razed. Matthäus Merian described this event in 1642 as follows:

"In 1430 the Hussites from Bohemia attacked / Culmbach and Barreut / and committed great acts of cruelty / like wild animals / against the common people / and certain individuals. / The priests / monks and nuns they either burnt at the stake / or took them onto the ice of lakes and rivers / (in Franconia and Bavaria) and doused them with cold water / and killed them in a deplorable way / as Boreck reported in the Bohemian Chronicle, page 450"…

By 1528, less than ten years after the start of the Reformation, the lords of the Frankish margrave territories switched to the Lutheran faith

At its center today is the Richard Wagner Museum in the composer's former home, Villa Wahnfried. Wagner's operas are performed at the Bayreuther Festspielhaus, home of the annual Bayreuth Festival. On the eastern outskirts, the Hermitage Gardens surrounds the Altes Schloß Eremitage palace and the Temple of the Sun (Sonnentempel), honoring the god Apollo

Belsay Castle is a 14th-century medieval castle situated at Belsay, Northumberland, England. It is a Scheduled Ancient Monument and a Grade I listed building.[1]

The main structure, a substantial three-storey rectangular pele tower with rounded turrets and battlements, was constructed about 1370, and was the home of the Middleton family. In 1614 Thomas Middleton built a new manor house attached to the tower. A west wing was added in 1711 but was later largely demolished in 1872 by Sir Arthur Middleton when the remainder of the house was considerably altered

The castle was abandoned as a residence by the family in the early 19th century when Sir Charles Monck built Belsay Hall close by

The interiors were largely removed and it was then used as a ready-made folly, as was fashionable among the aristocracy at the time, serving as setting for garden parties and other entertainments

The castle is administered by English Heritage and is open the public

A house and garden existed at Blickling before the estate was purchased by the Boleyn family in the 1450s, but no records survive to give an indication of their appearance

This was home to Sir Thomas Boleyn, Earl of Wiltshire and his wife, Elizabeth, between 1499 and 1505. It is presumed that their first two children Mary and George were born at Blickling Hall, along with several other Boleyn infants who did not live long. If the couple's most famous child, Anne, was in fact born before 1505 (as one school of historical thought contends) then she too was born at Blickling; other historians maintain that Anne was born after 1505, probably in 1507, by which time Sir Thomas had moved to Hever Castle in Kent

Nonetheless, a statue and portrait of Anne Boleyn reside in Blickling Hall claiming "Anna Bolena hic nata 1507" (Anne Boleyn born here 1507)

It is said that every year, on the anniversary of her execution, Anne Boleyn's headless ghost arrives at Blickling Hall in a carriage drawn by a headless horseman. But she hasn't lost her head completely in the afterlife-she carries it along with her during her haunting's

It was voted the most haunted house in Britain in a National Trust survey in October 2007

In 1616 Sir Henry Hobart, a lawyer, acquired the estate and remodeled the gardens to include ponds, wilderness and a parterre garden. A mount, literally a hill, was made to provide views of the new garden

    Saint Luke's Church
    The Parish Church of St Luke is an Anglican church, on Sydney Street, Chelsea, London SW3, just off of King's Road

    Ecclesiastically it is in the Deanery of Chelsea, part of the Diocese of London

    It was designed by James Savage in 1819 and is of architectural significance as one of the earliest Gothic Revival churches in London, perhaps the earliest to be a complete new construction

    St Luke's is one of the first group of Commissioners' churches, having received a grant of £8,333 towards its construction with money voted by Parliament as a result of the Church Building Act of 1818

    The church is recorded in the National Heritage List for England as a designated Grade I listed building

    The gardens of St Luke's are Grade II listed on the Register of Historic Parks and Gardens

Roxbury
This today is a dissolved municipality and an officially recognized neighborhood of Boston, Massachusetts. It was a town in Norfolk County before it was annexed to Boston in Suffolk County. One of several towns settled by the passengers from the Winthrop Fleet in 1630, the town was granted more land in 1660 by Massachusetts Bay Colony. The grant, called New Roxbury, was later renamed Woodstock and eventually became part of Connecticut

While the northeastern section was becoming one of America's first streetcar suburbs, the rural southwestern section became home to Brook Farm in 1841, a utopian commune based of the ideals of the Transcendentalism movement

The town was split in 1851 and the rural western two-thirds was established as a new town of West Roxbury. The east become more integrated with the city until it was annexed to Boston in 1868, after which it was referred to as Boston Highlands.

Bournemouth is Don's home town with many related places from his youth

It is a large coastal resort town on the south coast of England; at the 2011 census, the town had a population of 183,491, making it the largest in the administrative county of Dorset. With Poole to the west and Christchurch in the east, Bournemouth is part of the South East Dorset conurbation, which has a population of 465,000

In the 12th century the region around the mouth of the River Bourne was part of the Hundred of Holdenhurst. The hundred later became the Liberty of Westover when it was extended to include the settlements of North Ashley, Muscliff, Muccleshell, Throop, Iford, Pokesdown, Tuckton and Wick, and incorporated into the Manor of Christchurch. Although the Dorset and Hampshire region surrounding it had been the site of human settlement for thousands of years, Westover was largely a remote and barren heathland before 1800

In 1574 the Earl of Southampton noted that the area was "Devoid of all habitation", and as late as 1795 the Duke of Rutland recorded that "… on this barren and uncultivated heath there was not a human to direct us"

It was founded as a place in 1810 by Lewis Tregonwell, where the area had been a deserted heathland, occasionally visited by fishermen and smugglers. Initially marketed as a health resort, the town received a boost when it appeared in Augustus Granville's 1841 book, "The Spas of England". Bournemouth's growth accelerated with the arrival of the railway, and it became a town in 1870

Historically part of Hampshire, it joined Dorset with the reorganization of local government in 1974. Through local government changes in 1997, the town began to be administered by a unitary authority independent of Dorset County Council, although it remains part of that ceremonial county. Since April 2019 the unitary authority has been merged with that of Poole, as well as the non-metropolitan district of Christchurch to create the Bournemouth, Christchurch and Poole unitary authority

The town centre has notable Victorian architecture and the 202-foot spire of St Peter's Church, one of three Grade I listed churches in the borough, is a local landmark

Bournemouth's location has made it a popular destination for tourists, attracting over five million visitors annually with its beaches and popular nightlife. The town is also a regional centre of business, home of the Bournemouth International Centre or BIC, and a financial sector that is worth more than £1,000 million in gross value added

Brabant was the Province of Brabant, a province in Belgium ("België" in French) from 1830 to 1995; it was originally created in 1815 as South Brabant, part of the United Kingdom of the Netherlands

After the Belgian Revolution of 1830, the Southern Netherlands (including South and Central Brabant) became independent as Belgium, and later also Luxembourg. The province was then renamed simply Brabant and became the central province of Belgium, with its capital city Brussels. The province contained three arrondissements: Brussels, Leuven and Nivelles

In 1961-1963 the language borders were established, from which the province was divided into a Dutch-speaking region, a French-speaking region and the bilingual Brussels-the Brussels arrondissement was split to this end

In 1989, Brussels-Capital Region was created, but the region was still part of the province of Brabant. In 1995, the province of Brabant was split into the Dutch-speaking Flemish Brabant, the French-speaking Walloon Brabant and the bilingual Brussels-Capital Region

Bristol, Bristol County, England (Medieval), Europe

Bristol is an ancient area of South West England. The city of Bristol began as a town in about 1020 and was incorporated with neighboring suburbs in 1373, the first town in England to be given this status. Bristol County was also created at that time. Events listed for this place are from the time of Medieval England (1066-1485) and earlier; refer to the Bristol County, England place list for details and the events after 1485

The Bristol area has a very long history with events 300,000 (and possibly more) years ago. Archaeological finds of flint tools (made with the Levallois technique) indicate the presence of Neanderthals in the Shirehampton and St Annes areas of Bristol during the Middle Palaeolithic, and Iron Age hill forts are to be found near the city at Leigh Woods and Clifton Down, on the side of the Avon Gorge, and on Kings Weston Hill near Henbury. A Roman settlement, Abona, existed at what is now Sea Mills (connected to Bath by a Roman road); another was at the present-day Inns Court. Isolated Roman villas and small forts and settlements were also scattered throughout the area

Bristol was a trading centre in 1020 with a mint producing silver pennies bearing its name. By 1067 Brycgstow was a well-fortified burh, and that year the townsmen beat off a raiding party from Ireland led by three of Harold Godwinson's sons. Under Norman rule, the town had one of the strongest castles in southern England. Bristol received a royal charter in 1155 and was historically divided between Gloucestershire and Somerset until 1373 when it became a county of itself. Bristol was the place of exile for Diarmait Mac Murchada, the Irish king of Leinster, after being overthrown. The Bristol merchants subsequently played a prominent role in funding Richard Strongbow de Clare and the Norman invasion of Ireland

The port of Bristol developed in the 11th century around the confluence of the Rivers Frome and Avon, adjacent to Bristol Bridge just outside the town walls. By the 12th century Bristol was an important port, handling much of England's trade with Ireland, including slaves. There was also an important

Jewish community in Bristol from the late 12th century through to the late 13th century when all Jews were expelled from England

During this period, Bristol became a shipbuilding and manufacturing centre. By the 14th century Bristol, York and Norwich were England's largest medieval towns after London. One-third to one-half of the population died in the Black Death of 1348–49, checked population growth, and its population remained between 10,000 and 12,000 for most of the 15th and 16th centuries

From the 13th to the 18th century, Bristol was among the top three English cities, after London, in tax receipts and was surpassed by the rapid rise of Birmingham, Manchester and Liverpool in the Industrial Revolution

Bristol began as a town in about 1020, gaining city status in 1542; it also became a county in 1373. The city today borders the counties of North Somerset and South Gloucestershire, with the cities of Bath and Gloucester to the south-east and north-east, respectively. Refer to the "Many places" in place details for more information on the name

During the 15th century, Bristol was the second most important port in the England, trading with Ireland, Iceland and Gascony, France. It was the starting point for many voyages, including Robert Sturmy's (1457–58) unsuccessful attempt to break the Italian monopoly of Eastern Mediterranean trade. New exploration voyages were launched by Venetian John Cabot, who in 1497 made landfall in North America. A 1499 voyage, led by merchant William Weston of Bristol, was the first expedition commanded by an Englishman to North America

During the first decade of the 16th century, Bristol's merchants undertook a series of exploration voyages to North America and even founded a commercial organization, 'The Company Adventurers to the New Found Land', to assist their endeavors. However, they seem to have lost interest in North America after 1509, having incurred great expenses and made little profit. Bristol merchants concentrated on developing trade with Spain and its American colonies that included the smuggling of prohibited goods, such as food and guns, to Iberia during the Anglo-Spanish War (1585–1604). Bristol's illicit trade grew enormously after 1558, becoming integral to its economy

The original Diocese of Bristol was founded in 1542 when the former Abbey of St. Augustine (founded by Robert Fitzharding four hundred years earlier) became Bristol Cathedral. During the English Civil War in the 1640s the city was occupied by Royalists, who built the Royal Fort House on the site of an earlier Parliamentarian stronghold

Growth of the city and trade came with the rise of England's American colonies in the 17th century. Bristol's location on the west side of Great Britain gave its ships an advantage in sailing to and from the New World, and the city's merchants made the most of it. The 18th century saw an expansion of England's role in the Atlantic trade in Africans taken for slavery to the Americas. Bristol and Liverpool became centres of the Triangular Trade. In the first side of the slavery triangle, manufactured goods were shipped to West Africa and exchanged for Africans; the enslaved captives were transported across the Atlantic to the Americas in the Middle Passage under brutal conditions. In the third side of the triangle, plantation goods such as sugar, tobacco, rum, rice, cotton and a few slaves (sold to the aristocracy as house servants) returned across the Atlantic. Some household slaves were baptised in the hope this would mean their freedom in England. The Somerset Case of 1772 clarified that slavery was illegal in England. At the height of the Bristol slave trade from 1700 to 1807, more than 2,000 slave ships carried a conservatively estimated 500,000 people from Africa to slavery in the Americas. The Seven Stars public house, where abolitionist Thomas Clarkson collected information on the slave trade, is still operating

Fishermen from Bristol, who had fished the Grand Banks of Newfoundland since the 16th century, began settling Newfoundland permanently in larger numbers during the 17th century, establishing colonies at Bristol's Hope and Cuper's Cove. Because of Bristol's nautical environment, maritime safety was an important issue in the city. During the 19th century, Samuel Plimsoll, known as "the sailor's friend," campaigned to make the seas safer; shocked by overloaded vessels, he successfully fought for a compulsory load line on ships

In 1739 John Wesley founded the first Methodist chapel, the New Room, in Bristol. Wesley, along with his brother Charles Wesley and George Whitefield, preached to large congregations in Bristol and the neighboring village of Kingswood, often in the open air

The city was associated with Victorian engineer Isambard Kingdom Brunel, who designed the Great Western Railway between Bristol and London Paddington, two pioneering Bristol-built oceangoing steamships (SS Great Britain and SS Great Western), and the Clifton Suspension Bridge. The new railway replaced the Kennet and Avon Canal, which had fully opened in 1810 as the main route for the transport of goods between Bristol and London. Competition from Liverpool (beginning around 1760), disruptions of maritime commerce due to war with France (1793) and the abolition of the slave trade (1807) contributed to Bristol's failure to keep pace with the newer manufacturing centres of Northern England and the West Midlands. The tidal Avon Gorge, which had secured the port during the Middle Ages, had become a liability. An 1804–09 plan to improve the city's port with a floating Harbour designed by William Jessop was a costly error, requiring high Harbour fees

By 1867, ships were getting larger and the meanders in the river Avon prevented boats over 300 feet (90 m) from reaching the Harbour, resulting in falling trade. The port facilities were migrating downstream to Avonmouth and new industrial complexes were founded there. Some of the traditional industries including copper and brass manufacture went into decline, but the import and processing of tobacco flourished with the expansion of the W.D.

& H.O. Wills business

Supported by new industry and growing commerce, Bristol's population (66,000 in 1801), quintupled during the 19th century, resulting in the creation of new suburbs such as Clifton and Cotham. These provide architectural examples from the Georgian to the Regency style, with many fine terraces and villas facing the road, and at right angles to it. In the early 19th century, the romantic medieval gothic style appeared, partially as a reaction against the symmetry of Palladianism, and can be seen in buildings such as the Bristol City Museum and Art Gallery, the Royal West of England Academy, and The Victoria Rooms. Riots broke out in 1793 and 1831; the first over the renewal of tolls on Bristol Bridge, and the second against the rejection of the second Reform Bill by the House of Lords. The population by 1841 had reached 140,158

The Diocese of Bristol had undergone several boundary changes by 1897 when it was "reconstituted" into the configuration which has lasted into the 21st century

From a population of about 330,000 in 1901, Bristol grew steadily during the 20th century, peaking at 428,089 in 1971. Its Avonmouth docklands were enlarged during the early 1900s by the Royal Edward Dock. Another new dock, the Royal Portbury Dock, opened across the river from Avonmouth during the 1970s. As air travel grew in the first half of the century, aircraft manufacturers built factories. The unsuccessful Bristol International Exhibition was held on Ashton Meadows in the Bower Ashton area in 1914. After the premature closure of the exhibition the site was used, until 1919, as barracks for the Gloucestershire Regiment during World War I

Bristol was heavily damaged by Luftwaffe raids during World War II; about 1,300 people living or working in the city were killed and nearly 100,000 buildings were damaged, at least 3,000 beyond repair. The original central shopping area, near the bridge and castle, is now a park containing two bombed churches and fragments of the castle. A third bomb-damaged church nearby, St Nicholas, has been restored and is a museum housing a 1756 William Hogarth triptych painted for the high altar of St Mary Redcliffe. The museum also has statues of King Edward I (moved from Arno's Court Triumphal Arch) and King Edward III (taken from Lawfords' Gate in the city walls when they were demolished about 1760), and 13th-century statues of Robert, 1st Earl of Gloucester (builder of Bristol Castle) and Geoffrey de Montbray (who built the city's walls) from Bristol's Newgate

The rebuilding of Bristol city centre was characterized by 1960s and 1970s skyscrapers, mid-century modern architecture and road improvements. Beginning in the 1980s some main roads were closed, the Georgian-era Queen Square and Portland Square were restored, the Broadmead shopping area regenerated, and one of the city center's tallest mid-century towers was demolished. Bristol's road infrastructure changed dramatically during the 1960s and 1970s with the development of the M4 and M5 motorways, which meet at the Almondsbury Interchange just north of the city and link Bristol with London (M4 eastbound), Swansea (M4 westbound across the Severn Estuary), Exeter (M5 southbound) and Birmingham (M5 northbound). Bristol was bombed twice by the IRA, in 1974 and again in 1978

The 20th-century relocation of the docks to Avonmouth Docks and Royal Portbury Dock, 7 miles (11 km) downstream from the city centre, has allowed the redevelopment of the old dock area (the Floating Harbour). Although the docks' existence was once in jeopardy (since the area was seen as a derelict industrial site), the inaugural 1996 International Festival of the Sea held in and around the docks affirmed the area as a leisure asset of the city

There are 35 populated places named Bristol around the world, the vast majority of which are in the United States

Bristol in England played a major part in the discovery and settlement of the United States, it being the port from where John Cabot sailed on his 1497 voyage which is commonly credited as the first from Europe to North America, although there is evidence that he was not the first European to sail there. The city was a major port at the time North America was being colonized, resulting in many of the American and Canadian towns of the same name being named after it

The six villages of the valley - Kingston Deverill, Monkton Deverill, Brixton, Hill Deverill, Longbridge Deverill and Crockerton - are known as the Deverills

A large Roman villa was discovered in the village in February of 2015; after excavations by archaeologists from Historic England and The Salisbury Museum, a mosaic floor was uncovered of a large Roman property, similar in size and structure to the great Roman villa at Chedworth, Gloucestershire. Surviving sections of walls (5ft in height) confirmed that the mosaic formed part of a grand villa, thought to have been three storeys in height, its grounds extending over 110 yards in width and length

Ancient Troy (Troia) of Turkey and Greece
Troy is now no longer a physical place but most certainly existed-it has been assessed to be quite close to today's city of Troia, Tevfikiye Köyü in the Intepe/Çanakkale Province of Turkey

It was an ancient Grecian city situated in the far northwest of the region known in late Classical antiquity as "Asia Minor;" it is more recently known as "Anatolia," which is in modern Turkey, near to the southwest mouth of the Dardanelles strait (just to the south) and northwest of Mount Ida

The present-day location is known as "Hisarlik"

Alternate spellings include

Latin: Ilium
Hittite: Wilusha or Truwisha
Turkish: Truva or Troya

Chapel Allerton, Somerset County, England (United Kingdom), Europe (51° 14' 43.81" N, 2° 51' 34.94" W)
Chapel Allerton is a village and civil parish, south of Cheddar in the English county of Somerset

The parish includes the hamlets of Ashton and Stone Allerton

The name comes from "Aelfweard's settlement", with the chapel prefix being added in 1708 to distinguish it from the adjoining Stone Allerton. The manor was brought in 1492 by John Gunthorpe and passed to the Bishop of Wells

Chapel Allerton was part of the hundred of Bempstone

Chapel Allerton forms part of Sedgemoor district and is located southwest of Cheddar. It is noted for the striking Ashton windmill nearby.

Charlemont, County of Franklin, The Province of Massachusetts Bay, British Colonial America (North America) (42° 37' 40.01" N, 72° 52' 13.01" W)

Charlemagne was first settled by Moses Rice who purchased 2,200 acres (8.9 km2) on 23 April 1743 that been previously set off as Boston Township Number 1 in 1735 by the Great and General Court. The town (which is far inland from the Cape Cod Bay) was along the distant frontier at the time and was incorporated in 1765, most likely named for the town in Northern Ireland. The town was mostly rural, with farming being the main industry until the advent of the railroad, which traveled through town towards the Hobson Tunnel. Today the town industry also includes tourism, with a ski area and other tourist areas along the Mohawk Trail

The town was the subject of several raids by Native Americans: while plowing his fields one day, Rice was shot and wounded by Indians lying in ambush. They also shot and killed another man, Phineas Arms at the same time and captured Moses' eight-year-old grandson Asa, who had been riding the plow horse. Moses was taken to the adjoining woods, scalped, and left for dead, but Asa was carried off to Canada

Chatham (and South Chatham to the West) is a seaside town at the southeastern tip of Cape Cod, in the state of Massachusetts. On the Atlantic Ocean, it's known for its beaches, including Lighthouse Beach near the landmark 19th-century Chatham Lighthouse. The Chatham Railroad Museum exhibits model trains and train artifacts in a former depot dating from 1887. To the south, Monomoy National Wildlife Refuge provides a vast habitat for migratory birds.

Chilmark is in Dukes County of The Province of Massachusetts Bay in British Colonial America and is a town located on Martha's Vineyard, an island south of the Cape Cod Bay

It was established as the first English settlement of Martha's Vineyard, Nantucket in 1642 by Governor Thomas Mayhew, the Elder (March 31, 1593-March 25, 1682); the town officially incorporated on September 14, 1694, the first town to separate from the two original towns of Tisbury and Edgartown. The new town was named for Chilmark, the ancestral home of the family of Governor Thomas Mayhew of Tisbury, in the English county of Wiltshire. In 1714, Chilmark was made a township including the island of No-mans Land

City of London, Region of Greater London, England (Tudor), Europe
City of London, Region of Greater London, England (United Kingdom), Europe
City of York, North Riding of Yorkshire, England (Kingdom of Great Britain), Europe
The City of York is a cathedral city in North Yorkshire, England with Roman origins, sited at the confluence of the rivers Ouse and Foss and is the largest settlement and the administrative centre of the wider City of York district

It is the historic county town of Yorkshire and has many historic buildings and other structures, such as a minster, castle, and city wall

The city was founded under the name of Eboracum in 71 AD and became the capital of the Roman province of Britannia Inferior, and later of the kingdoms of Deira, Northumbria, and Scandinavian York. In the Middle Ages, it became the northern England ecclesiastical province's centre, and grew as a wool-trading centre

In the 19th century, it became a major railway network hub and confectionery manufacturing centre. During the Second World War, part of the Baedeker Blitz bombed the city; it was less affected by the war than other northern cities, with several historic buildings being gutted and restored up to the 1960s

The city is one of 15 in England to have a lord mayor, and one of three to have "The Right Honourable" title affixed, the others being London's and Bristol's

Historic governance of the city was as a county corporate, not included in the county's riding system. The city has since been covered by a municipal borough, county borough, and since 1996 a non-metropolitan district (the City of York), which also includes surrounding villages and rural areas, and the town of Haxby. The current district's local council is responsible for providing all local services and facilities throughout this area. With a population of 141,685 at the 2021 UK census

The wider district had a population of 198,100. According to 2021 census data, the wider district has a population of 202,800, a 2.4% increase compared to the 2011 census

     Swansea

Swansea is a town in Bristol County, southeastern Massachusetts, far from the Cape Cod Bay; it is located at the mouth of the Taunton River, just west of Fall River, 47 miles south of Boston and 12 miles southeast of Providence, Rhode Island

Swansea was named after the city of Swansea in Wales, the hometown of some of the original settlers. John Miles, the founder of the first Baptist Church in Wales, moved to Swansea in 1662/3. William Brenton had purchased the land from Native Americans. Parts of its territory were originally part of Rehoboth, Massachusetts

In 1667 the first Baptist church in Massachusetts relocated to Swansea from Rehoboth after experiencing religious intolerance there, and Swansea was incorporated as an independent town. Initially, the town established a committee to assign rank of 1, 2, or 3 to the residents with the first getting 3 acres of land, the second 2, and the third 1. The committee could promote and demote residents as it saw fit. The system collapsed in 1681 when the committee voted to make five residents the highest rank and to make the rank hereditary. The town unanimously voted to abolish the system

On June 20, 1675, the first Indian attack of King Philip's War had all 70 settlers confined to their stockade. The attack had taken place at the Miles Garrison, near the Coles River. By June 25 the entire town had been burned, although a handful of the colonists escaped to Taunton. When the active war ended in 1676, the town was soon rebuilt. The Miles Garrison stood the test of time, but was demolished in the 1970s. The plot it was on remains overgrown, free from construction, and a commemorative marker was placed there by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts in 1912

After the war, many small industries, such as forges, ironworks and fisheries, opened up in the town. Many would later leave, and there remains a large agricultural sector

What is now Barrington, Rhode Island (part of Massachusetts until 1747) was separated from the rest of Swansea in 1717, over religious differences

In the late 1890s, trolleys connected the town to Providence, Fall River and Taunton, and the town has retained a suburban residential feel. Today Swansea is well known for its retail areas

This location, at the southern-most point of New Jersey, has no recorded documents or images from that time. An English Captain Henry Hudson first documented the peninsula in 1609 as he was sailing his small yacht, named the "Half Moon", when he came upon the small peninsula situated between the Atlantic Ocean and the Delaware Bay

The cape was formed around 1620 by a Dutch Captain, Cornelius Jacobsen Mey who came upon the peninsula while exploring the Delaware River. He named the area Cape Mey after himself; the spelling was later changed to Cape May

There were many whaling families who came from Long Island (part of Connecticut at that time) and from the Massachusetts Bay Colony; the Hands, Ludlams, Spicers, Hildreths, Leamings, Shaws, Matthews, Swains, Stites, Corsons, Godfreys, Townsends, Taylors, Hughes, Carmans, Whilldins, Eldredges, Fosters, Cresses, Schellengers, Stillwells, Robinsons, Reeves, among others

Essex County was created by the General Court of the Massachusetts Bay Colony on May 10, 1643, when it was ordered "that the whole plantation within this jurisdiction be divided into four sheires"

Named after the county in England, Essex then comprised the towns of Salem, Lynn, Wenham, Ipswich, Rowley, Newbury, Gloucester, and Andover

In 1680, Haverhill and Salisbury, both located north of the Merrimack River, were annexed to Essex County. These communities had been part of Massachusetts' colonial-era Norfolk County

The remaining four towns within colonial Norfolk County, which included Exeter and what is now Portsmouth, were transferred to what became Rockingham County in the Province of New Hampshire. The ten large founding Massachusetts-based settlements were then subdivided over the centuries to produce Essex County's modern composition of cities and towns

Colonial County of Henrico, Colony of Virginia, British Colonial America (North America)
Henrico City (originally called "Henrico Cittie") was one of the four incorporations established in the Colony of Virginia in 1619 by the proprietor, the Virginia Company. The plantations and developments were Henrico City, Charles City, Elizabeth City, and James City. The latter included the seat of government for the colony at Jamestown. Each of the four citties extended across the James River, the main conduit of transportation of the era

Henrico's most promising early development, Sir Thomas Dale's "Henricus", was abandoned during the Indian Massacre of 1622, as were the Falling Creek Ironworks. However, the offshoot town of Henrico (as differentiated from the adjacent, defunct fort) survived until 1786, its courthouse having been burned by Benedict Arnold in 1781, during the 1776 revolution. Both locations were recently rediscovered and are now located in Chesterfield County, which was formed from parts of Henrico before the American Revolutionary War

In 1634, under Royal authority, a portion became Henrico Shire, later Henrico County, Virginia. The county seat was designated near John Rolfe and Pocahontas' former home Varina Farms and remained there until 1752, when a new courthouse was built in Richmond

Colonial County of Isle of Wight, Colony of Virginia, British Colonial America (North America)
The Isle of Wight County is located in the Hampton Roads region of Virginia, USA with a northeastern boundary on the coast of Hampton Roads waterway

"Hampton Roads" is the name of both a body of water that today serves as a wide channel for the James, Nansemond and Elizabeth rivers between Old Point Comfort and Sewell's Point (where the Chesapeake Bay flows into the Atlantic Ocean) and the surrounding metropolitan region located in the Southeastern Virginia and Northeastern North Carolina portions of the Tidewater region

The original name for this area was "Warrosquyoake Shire", derived from the name of the Native Americans of the area; shortly after the establishment of the Jamestown Colony (see Colony of Virginia note), the settlers began to spread out into the areas adjacent to the waterway creating the county. The name went through transliteration and Anglicisation, eventually becoming known as "Warwicke Squeake" County… it was renamed in 1637 to the "Isle of Wight County" after the island off of the south coast of England, from where many of its early colonists had come

A Captain John Smith crossed the James River in 1608 and obtained fourteen bushels of corn from the Native American inhabitants, the Warrosquyoack (or Warraskoyak), a tribe of the Powhatan Confederacy, who had three towns in the area of modern Smithfield. English colonists drove the Warraskoyak from their villages in 1622 and 1627, as part of their reprisals for the Great Massacre of 1622, in which the Native Americans had decimated English settlements, hoping to drive them out of their territory

As the county population developed, the leaders thought that they needed a county seat near the center of the area and built a new courthouse near the center of the county in 1800 as its county seat named "Isle of Wight"… the courthouse & associated tavern (Boykin's Tavern) are still standing, as are the 1822 clerk's offices nearby. A new courthouse was opened in 2010, across the street from the sheriff's office and county offices complex. The original courthouse serves as the government chambers for the Board of Supervisors, as well as the meeting hall for the School Board; the chambers are sometimes used as a court for civil trials if the new courthouse is fully in use

The county features two incorporated towns, Smithfield and Windsor. The first courthouse for the county was built in Smithfield in 1750; the original courthouse and its associated tavern (The Smithfield Inn) are still standing (as of 2019)

As of the 2010 census, the population was 35,270

Colonial County of Middlesex, The Colony of Massachusetts Bay, British Colonial America is today a county in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, in the United States. As of 2018, the estimated population was 1,614,714, making it the 22nd most populous county in the United States, and the most populous county in both Massachusetts and New England. On July 11, 1997, the Massachusetts legislature voted to abolish the executive government of Middlesex County due primarily to the county's insolvency. Though Middlesex County continues to exist as a geographic boundary it is used primarily as district jurisdictions within the court system and for other administrative purposes, such as an indicator for elections. Colonial County of Suffolk, The Colony of Massachusetts Bay, British Colonial America (North America)

The county was created by the Massachusetts General Court on May 10, 1643, when it was ordered "that the whole plantation within this jurisdiction be divided into four shires" and was named after Suffolk, England, which meant "southern folk."

Suffolk county (which is far to the north of Cape Cod Bay) initially contained the towns of Boston, Roxbury, Dorchester, Dedham, Braintree, Weymouth, and Hingham

In 1731, the extreme western portions of Suffolk County, which included Uxbridge, were split off to become part of Worcester County. In 1793, most of the original Suffolk County (including Milton) except for Boston, Chelsea, Hingham, and Hull (which remained in Suffolk) split off and became Norfolk County. Hingham and Hull would leave Suffolk County and join Plymouth County in 1803

Revere was set off from Chelsea and incorporated in 1846 and Winthrop was set off from Revere and incorporated in 1852. In the late 19th century and early 20th century, Boston annexed several adjacent cities and towns including Hyde Park, Roxbury, West Roxbury, and Dorchester from Norfolk County and Charlestown and Brighton from Middlesex County, resulting in an enlargement of Suffolk County

Colonial County of Worcester, The Province of Massachusetts Bay, British Colonial America (North America)

Worcester County (far to the west of the Cape Cod Bay) was formed from the eastern portion of colonial Hampshire County, the western portion of the original Middlesex County and the extreme western portion of the original Suffolk County

When the government of Worcester County was established on April 2, 1731, Worcester was chosen as its shire town (later known as a county seat)

From that date until the dissolution of the county government, it was the only county seat

Because of the size of the county, there were fifteen attempts over 140 years to split the county into two counties, but without success. Initially, Lancaster was proposed as the seat of the northern county; later, Petersham was proposed once and Fitchburg was proposed repeatedly, most recently in 1903. Perhaps as a concession, in August 1884 the Worcester County Registry of Deeds was split in two, with the Worcester Northern registry placed in Fitchburg

Colonial County of York, Province of Maine, British Colonial America (North America) (43° 28' 0.01" N, 70° 40' 59.99" W)
First settled by Europeans in 1624, the plantation was originally called Agamenticus, the Abenaki term for the York River

In 1638, settlers changed the name to Bristol after Bristol, England, from which they had immigrated. Envisioning a great city arising from the wilderness, Sir Ferdinando Gorges, lord proprietor of Maine under the Plymouth patent, named the capital of his province Gorgeana. In 1642, by charter of King

Charles I, Gorgeana became the first incorporated city in America

Following Gorges' death, the Massachusetts Bay Company claimed his dominion and in 1652, York, Massachusetts, was incorporated from a portion of Gorgeana, making it the second oldest town in Maine after Kittery, incorporated two years earlier

The Province of North Carolina (also "The North Carolina Colony") was a British colony that existed in North America from 1712 to 1776, and was created as a proprietary colony

The power of the British government was vested in a governor of North Carolina, but the colony declared independence from Great Britain in 1776

The Province of North Carolina had four capitals: Bath (1712 - 1722), Edenton (1722 - 1743), Brunswick (1743 - 1770), and New Bern (after 1770)

It later was divided into the states of North Carolina and Tennessee; parts of the colony were combined with other territories to form the states of Georgia, Alabama, and Mississippi

  Reconstruction 1865–1877

European exploration of the area began in April 1540, with the Hernando de Soto expedition, who unwittingly introduced new Eurasian diseases that decimated the local Native American population as they lacked any immunity

In 1663 the English Crown granted land to eight proprietors of what became the colony. The first settlers came to the Province of Carolina at the port of Charleston in 1670; they were mostly wealthy planters and their slaves coming from the English Caribbean colony of Barbados

Colony of Tennessee, British Colonial America (North America)
Colony of Virginia, British Colonial America (North America)
The Colony of Virginia in Colonial America was created from the Jamestown Colony, the first permanent English settlement in North America which was located near present-day Williamsburg, Virginia

Established on Sunday, May 14, 1607, Jamestown Colony gave England its 1st foothold in the European competition for the New World, which had been dominated by the Spanish since the voyages of Christopher Columbus in the late 15th century

Many of the people who had settled in the New World came to escape religious persecution; the Pilgrims, founders of Plymouth, Massachusetts, arrived in 1620. In both Virginia and Massachusetts, the colonists flourished with some assistance from Native Americans. New World grains (such as corn) kept the colonists from starving while, in Virginia, tobacco provided a valuable cash crop

The first English plantations along the south shore (within the present-day Isle of Wight) were established by Puritan colonists, beginning with that of Christopher Lawne in May 1618. Several members of the Puritan Bennett family also settled there, including Richard Bennett. He led the Puritans to neighboring Nansemond in 1635, and later was appointed as governor of the Virginia Colony

The area which became the town of Concord was originally known as "Musketaquid", situated at the confluence of the Sudbury and Assabet rivers.[5] The name was an Algonquian word for "grassy plain", fitting the area's low-lying marshes and kettle holes. Native Americans had cultivated corn crops there; the rivers were rich with fish and the land was lush and arable. The area was largely depopulated by the smallpox plague that swept across the Americas after Europeans arrived

In 1635, a group of settlers from Britain led by Rev. Peter Bulkeley and Major Simon Willard received a land grant from the General Court and negotiated a land purchase with the remnants of the local tribe. Bulkeley was an influential religious leader who "carried a good number of planters with him into the woods" and Willard was a canny trader who spoke the Algonquian language and had gained the trust of Native Americans. They exchanged wampum, hatchets, knives, cloth, and other useful items for the six-square-mile purchase from Squaw Sachem of Mistick, which formed the basis of the new town, called "Concord" in appreciation of the peaceful acquisition

Conestoga Township is today a township in west central Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, United States. It was formed in 1712 as part of Chester County, Pennsylvania, British Colonial America; Lancaster County was not formed until 1729; Pequea Township was formed from Conestoga Township

Conestoga wagons are named for the township, but it cannot be proven that the first such wagons were in fact built in the township… however, these wagons were indeed built in the Conestoga Township

The Colemanville Covered Bridge and the "Big and Little Indian Rock Petroglyphs" are listed on the National Register of Historic Places

København Slot (Copenhagen Castle)
Copenhagen Castle (Danish: Københavns Slot) was a castle on Slotsholmen in Copenhagen, Denmark. It was built in the late 14th century at the site of the current Christiansborg Palace

In 1167, Bishop Absalon (c. 1128-1201) founded a fortress on the islet of Slotsholmen in the harbor of Copenhagen. It consisted of a courtyard with several buildings and surrounded by a wall for protection. During the years after the demolition of Bishop Absalon's Castle by the Hansa League in 1369, the ruins on the island were covered with earthworks, on which the new stronghold, Copenhagen Castle, was built. In 1343 King Valdemar Atterdag took over Absalon's castle, but upon his death in 1375 the right to the property returned to the Diocese of Roskilde

The castle had a curtain wall and was surrounded by a moat which had an inner diameter of about 50 meters and with a large, solid tower as an entrance gate. The castle was still the property of the Bishop of Roskilde until King Eric of Pomerania usurped the rights to the castle in 1417. The Hanseatic League attacked the castle and in the Bombardment of Copenhagen during the Dano-Hanseatic War (1426-1435). The attack was fought back by in 1428 by Queen Philippa, who led the defense from Copenhagen Castle

Corfe Castle is today a thousand-year-old royal castle, shaped by warfare and for some, the castle will forever be associated with dark deeds, miraculous events and the murder of a king who became a saint

The West Bailey contains the earliest surviving building in the castle, the Norman Old Hall, thought to occupy the site of an even older Saxon hall-it is here that the drama of a murder is said to have unfolded on 18 March 978

The teenage King Edward was visiting his stepmother Elfryda and his half-brother Ethelred at Corfe Castle; some say Edward was murdered on the orders of his stepmother and quickly buried, with little pomp at nearby Wareham--see his note

The area of Cornwall (marked as "County of Cornwall" for consistency; clearly not a county in the early years!) existed in the Paleolithic & had sporadic visits by groups of humans; continuous occupation started around 10,000 years ago, after the end of the last ice age

In the first century, Cornwall was part of the territory of the tribe of the Dumnonii that included modern-day Devon and parts of Somerset

Cornwall's Early Medieval history has references to a Cornish King named Arthur, featured in such legendary works as Geoffrey of Monmouth's "Historia Regum Britanniae", predating the Arthurian legends of the Matter of Britain

After a period of Roman rule, Cornwall reverted to rule by independent Romano-British leaders and continued to have a close relationship with Brittany and Wales as well as southern Ireland, which neighbored across the Celtic Sea. After the collapse of Dumnonia, the remaining territory of Cornwall came into conflict with neighboring Wessex and in the middle of the ninth century, Cornwall fell under the control of Wessex, but it kept its own culture

In 1337, the title Duke of Cornwall was created by the English monarchy, to be held by the king's eldest son and heir. Cornwall, along with the neighboring county of Devon, maintained Stannary institutions that granted some local control over its most important product, tin, but by the time of Henry VIII most vestiges of Cornish autonomy had been removed as England became an increasingly centralized state under the Tudor dynasty. Conflicts with the center took place with the Cornish Rebellion of 1497 and Prayer Book Rebellion of 1549

Essex is today a county in southeast England, between London and the North Sea

One of the "home counties", it borders Suffolk and Cambridgeshire to the north, Hertfordshire to the west, Kent across the estuary of the River Thames to the south, and London to the southwest. The county town is Chelmsford, the only city in the county and it has Roman ruins and the Norman-era Colchester Castle, with a museum. Southwest, 18th-century Hylands House in Chelmsford is set amid vast parklands. To the north is the medieval market town of Saffron Walden, home to Jacobean estate Audley End House and Gardens

There are three definitions of the extent of Essex, the widest being the Ancient County, the more usual being the smaller Ceremonial County and smallest being the administrative county-the area administered by the County Council and which excludes the two unitary authorities of Thurrock and

Southend-on-Sea

The Ceremonial County occupies the eastern part of what was, during the Early Middle Ages, the Kingdom of Essex

While the transition from Somersetshire, England to Somerset is unclear, I used the end of the Kingdom of Great Britain in 1801; anything post this is Somerset

[http://britishfolklore.com/somerset]
The British folklore and fairy stories associated with the neolithic and prehistoric sites across Britain shared the following:

The name "Somersetshire" derives from Old English "Sumors?te", which is short for "Sumort?ns?te", meaning "the people living at or dependent upon modern Somerton"

The first known use of the name is in the law code of King Ine (Saxon King of Wessex from 688 to 726) making Somerset along with Hampshire, Wiltshire and Dorset one of the oldest yet still extant units of local government in the world. An alternative suggestion is that the name derives from Seo-mere-saetan meaning "settlers by the sea lakes"

The people of Somerset are first mentioned in the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle's entry for AD 845, in the inflected form "Sumursætum," but the county is first mentioned in the entry for 1015 using the same name. The archaic county name Somersetshire is first mentioned in the Chronicle's entry for 878

Although "Somersetshire" had been in common use as an alternative name for the county, it went out of fashion in the late 19th century, and is no longer used. This is possibly due to the adoption of "Somerset" as the official name for the county through the establishment of the County Council in 1889. However, as with other counties not ending in "shire," this suffix was superfluous, as there was no need to differentiate between the county and a town within it

Yorkshire (abbreviated Yorks) formally known as the County of York is a historic county of Northern England and the largest in the United Kingdom

Because of its great size in comparison with other English counties, functions have been undertaken over time by its subdivisions, which have also been subject to periodic reform. Throughout these changes, Yorkshire has continued to be recognised as a geographic territory and cultural region

The name is familiar and well understood across the United Kingdom and is in common use in the media and the military, and also features in the titles of current areas of civil administration such as North Yorkshire, South Yorkshire, West Yorkshire and the East Riding of Yorkshire

The emblem of Yorkshire is the White Rose of the English royal House of York, and the most commonly used flag representative of Yorkshire is the white rose on a blue field which, after nearly fifty years of use, was recognised by the Flag Institute on 29 July 2008

Dedham, Norfolk County, The Colony of Massachusetts Bay, British Colonial America (North America) (42° 14' 30.01" N, 71° 10' 0.01" W)
Dedham began with the first settlers' arrival in 1635

The Puritans who built the village on what the Indians called Tiot incorporated the plantation in 1636. They devised a form of government in which almost every freeman could participate and eventually chose selectmen to run the affairs of the town. They then formed a church and nearly every family had at least one member

Dedham is one of the few towns founded during the colonial era that has preserved extensive records of its earliest years.

Deerfield, County of Franklin, The Colony of Massachusetts Bay, British Colonial America (North America) (42° 32' 39.98" N, 72° 36' 22.00" W)
Deerfield, Franklin, The Colony of Massachusetts Bay, British Colonial America is far inland from the Cape Cod Bay

For several decades during the late seventeenth and early eighteenth centuries, Deerfield was the northwestern-most outpost of New England settlement. It occupies a fertile portion of the upper Connecticut River Valley now known as the Pioneer Valley. It was vulnerable to attack because of its position near the Berkshires highlands. For these reasons it was the site of intertribal warfare and several Anglo-French and Indian skirmishes during its early history

At the time of the English colonists' arrival, the Deerfield area was inhabited by the Algonquian-speaking Pocumtuck nation, who settled a major village by the same name. English colonists arrived in 1673, and Deerfield was incorporated in 1677. Settlement was the result of a court case in which the government in Boston returned some of Dedham to Native American control in exchange for land in the new township of Pocumtuck, on which Dedham residents could settle. The Dedham settlers' agent, John Plympton, signed a treaty with the Pocumtuck, including a man named Chaulk. But he had no authority to deed the land to the colonists and appeared to have only a rough idea of what he was signing. Native Americans and the English had different ideas about property and land use; this, along with competition for resources, contributed to conflicts between them

Mile End is a district in the London Borough of Tower Hamlets in the East End of London, 3.6 miles east-northeast of Charing Cross; the "Mile End" name is from the actual distance from Aldgate

Situated on the London-to-Colchester road, it was one of the earliest suburbs of the City of London; it became part of the metropolitan area of London in 1855, and is connected to the London Underground

It was also known as Mile End Old Town; the name provides a geographical distinction from the unconnected former hamlet called Mile End New Town

On May 30, 1630, Captain Squib of the ship "Mary and John" entered Boston Harbor and then landed a boat on June 17 with eight men at what was then a narrow peninsula known as Mattapan or Mattaponnock, that became the Dorchester shore

The town that was founded was centered on the First Parish Church of Dorchester, which still exists as the Unitarian-Universalist church on Meeting House Hill and is the oldest religious organization in present-day Boston, and was part of the creation of Suffolk County

In 1793, after years of negotiations considering various proposals for grouping towns. the creation of "Norfolk County" occurred by cutting it out of Suffolk and leaving only Boston and Chelsea in Suffolk County; see Dorchester, Norfolk County

In 1793, years of negotiations considering various proposals for grouping towns led to creation of "Norfolk County" by cutting it out of Suffolk and leaving only Boston and Chelsea in Suffolk County

The new county line to the south followed the old boundary between Massachusetts Bay and Plymouth Colonies and included Hingham and Cohasset as it continued toward the sea. At the north, it encompassed Roxbury, Dorchester, Hyde Park, Jamaica Plain and Roslindale, all sections of Boston today, and Brookline to the northwest

Dresden (in Sachsen) originated as the Slav village of "Drezdzany", meaning "Forest Dwellers on the Plain" on the north bank of the Elbe River

First mentioned in 1216, the town on the south bank was founded at a ford by Margrave Dietrich of Meissen as a German colony and the Slav settlement on the north bank, although older, was known as New Town, later as a German town on the south bank as Old Town

In 1270 Dresden became the capital of Margrave Henry the Illustrious, and after his death it belonged to the king of Bohemia and the margrave of Brandenburg until it was restored about 1319 to the margraves of Meissen, who chartered it in 1403

Upon the division of Saxony in 1485 it became the residence and capital of the Albertine line of Wettin rulers, later electors and kings of Saxony

Dresden accepted the Protestant Reformation in 1539

After a disastrous fire in 1491, the city was rebuilt and fortified. The electors Augustus I and Augustus II modernized the city in the Baroque and Rococo styles in the late 17th and 18th centuries, rebuilding New Town (burned in 1685) and founding Friedrichstadt, northwest of Old Town

The Treaty of Dresden (1745), between Prussia, Saxony, and Austria, ended the second Silesian War and confirmed Silesia as Prussian. Two-thirds destroyed in the Seven Years' War (1756–63), Dresden's fortifications were later dismantled

In 1813 Napoleon I made the town a centre of military operations and there won his last great battle on August 26 and 27 (see Battle of Dresden)

Before World War II, Dresden was known as "the Florence on the Elbe" considered to be one of the world's most beautiful cities owing to its architecture and art treasures. During the WWII it was almost completely destroyed by massive bombing raids that took place on the night of February 13–14, 1945, by an Anglo-American force. The raids obliterated much of Dresden and killed thousands of civilians; various postwar estimates placed the death toll between 35,000 and 135,000 people, but in the early 21st century an official German commission concluded that up to 25,000 had perished. The city continued to be bombarded in raids lasting until April 17, 1945, but little was achieved militarily

Dudley, Worcestershire, England (United Kingdom), Europe (52° 30' 26.98" N, 2° 5' 18.28" W)
Dudley is today a large town in the West Midlands of England (historically as shown, in Worcestershire) and is 6 miles (9.7 km) south-east of Wolverhampton and 10.5 miles (16.9 km) north-west of Birmingham

While Dudley Castle is in Staffordshire, historically the main town was always an enclave in the county of Worcestershire. With the administrative changes made by the UK Government in 1974, it was incorporated into the county of West Midlands

Dudley covers an area of the South Staffordshire Coalfield, which contributed heavily to its growth and industrialization during the 18th century Industrial Revolution

Dudley has a history dating back to Anglo-Saxon times, its name deriving from the Old English "Duddan Leah", meaning "Dudda's clearing"

One of its churches was named in honor of the Anglo-Saxon King and Saint, Edmund

Mentioned in the Domesday Book as Dudelei, in the hundred of Clent in Worcestershire, the town was listed as being a medium-sized manor in the possession of Earl Edwin of Mercia prior to the Norman Conquest, with William FitzAnsculf as Lord of the Manor in 1086

Dudley Castle, constructed in 1070 by William's father Ansculf de Picquigny after his acquisition of the town, served as the seat of the extensive Barony of Dudley, which possessed estates in eleven different counties across England. The castle provided the center from which the town and borough grew, with early coal and iron workings helping establish Dudley as a major market town during the Middle Ages, selling not only agricultural produce, but also iron goods at a national level

During the English Civil War Dudley served as a Royalist stronghold, with the castle besieged twice by the Parliamentarians and later partly demolished on the orders of the Government after the Royalist surrender

Dud Dudley, an illegitimate son of Edward Sutton, 5th Baron Dudley and Elizabeth Tomlinson, devised a method of smelting Iron ore using coke at his father's works in Cradley and Pensnett Chase, though his trade was unsuccessful due to circumstances of the time. Abraham Darby was descended from Dud Dudley's sister, Jane, and was the first person to produce iron commercially using coke instead of charcoal at his works in Coalbrookdale, Shropshire in 1709. Abraham Darby was born near Wrens Nest Hill near the town of Dudley and it is claimed that he may have known about Dud Dudley's earlier work

Dudley's population grew dramatically during the 18th and 19th centuries because of the increase in industry, with the main industries including coal and limestone mining. Other industries included iron, steel, engineering, metallurgy, glass cutting, textiles and leather-working

With the decline of industry in Dudley since the end of WWII, the area has had an extremely high level of unemployment, resulting in the closure of many businesses in the town

Dursley gained borough status in 1471 but lost it in 1886

From 1837 to 1851 it was the administrative centre of Dursley Registration District which recorded vital records of people living in the parishes of Dursley as well as North Nibley, Coaley, Slimbridge, Stinchcombe, Cam, Nympsfield, Kingswood, Wotton-under-Edge, Owlpen and Uley which is tagged as part of Dursley--see note?

From 1886 until 1974 Dursley was the administrative centre of Dursley Rural District (RDC). In 1974 the RDC became part of Stroud District

The Grade-I listed parish church of St. James the Great dates from the 13th century. The modern building is largely of 14th and 15th century construction and carries the Tudor coat of arms on the outside below the guttering, indicating that some of its construction was funded by the Tudor royals. The original church spire collapsed in January 1699 during a bell-ringing session, causing casualties. The current bell tower, in an imposing Gothic survival style, was built by Thomas Sumsion of Colerne in 1708–09

The pillared market house, complete with statue of Queen Anne and bell turret, dates from 1738, when the town's markets attracted farmers and traders from miles around. It is now maintained by the Dursley Town Trust who also look after Jacob's House and the Heritage Centre.[1]

Ancient historical sites in the vicinity give evidence of earlier occupation. Uley Bury is an Iron Age hill fort dating from around 300BC. The area also has Neolithic long barrows; one called "Hetty Pegler's Tump" can be entered. Notable Roman remains exist at Frocester, West Hill near Uley, Woodchester and Calcot Manor

Edgartown, Colonial County of Dukes, The Colony of Massachusetts Bay, British Colonial America is today a tourist destination on the island of Martha's Vineyard and is the county seat. It was once a major whaling port, with historic houses that have been carefully preserved. Today it hosts yachting events around its large harbor. It includes the smaller island of Chappaquiddick, remembered in connection with a fatal incident in 1969, involving Edward Kennedy, who was staying in one of the town's hotels

    Elmley Castle
    Elmley Castle (also incorrectly identified as "Elmsley Castle") is a village and civil parish in Worcestershire, in England, United Kingdom. It is located on the north side of Bredon Hill 3 miles south east of Pershore in the local government district of Wychavon

    It had a population of 497 in 2001 and retains public amenities such as a bus route, public house, post office, primary school, local shop selling local produce, and church

    The remaining public house is called "The Queens Head", after Queen Elizabeth I who is supposed to have stopped there. According to local legend, Elizabeth I was presented with a hat on her arrival in the village on the road from Pershore, (a nearby town)

    The slope upwards out of the village at that point is still known as 'Besscaps'

    The remains of a stone cross are still present in the centre of the village. Its age is unknown and a significant portion remains underground

    The church of St. Mary dates from the end of the 11th century, the chancel shows herringbone pattern stonework in the external walls, the font has a 15th-century octagonal bowl on a 13th-century square base decorated with stone-carved serpents and dragons and the church was much added to in succeeding centuries. It contains grand monuments to Thomas, 1st Earl of Coventry and 17th century effigies of members of the Savage family. The decline in local Christian worshippers has led to a reduced service schedule at the church

 Wessex Kingdom
 The Kingdom of Wessex (originally, The Kingdom of the West Saxons) was an Anglo-Saxon kingdom in the south of Great Britain and was created by Cerdic and Cynric in 519

 The two main sources for the history of Wessex are the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle and the West Saxon Genealogical Regnal List, which sometimes

conflict

Wessex became a Christian kingdom after Cenwalh was baptised and was expanded under his rule. Cædwalla later conquered Sussex, Kent and the Isle of Wight. His successor, Ine, issued one of the oldest surviving English law codes and established a second West Saxon bishopric. The throne subsequently passed to a series of kings with unknown genealogies

In 871, the "Great Summer Army" had arrived from Scandinavia (reinforcing the "Great Heathen Army" who in 865 landed in England with several of the Danish commanders who combined their respective forces into one large army) invaded Wessex and, although Æthelred and Alfred won some victories and succeeded in preventing the conquest of their kingdom, a number of defeats and heavy losses of men compelled Alfred to pay the Danes to leave Wessex

England (MiddleAges part of Anglo-Saxon Britain), Europe (48° 41' 27.46" N, 9° 8' 26.25" E)
The timeframe of the various parts of Britain during the England-MiddleAges (the "Dark Ages") runs from Roman England (Britannia) in ~490 when the Romans departed to the Battle of Hastings in 1066, where England became Medieval England

The Anglo-Saxons (who created this age) were a Germanic-speaking cultural group (Germanic tribes) who had migrated from nearby northwestern Europe to the southern half of the island of Great Britain; they and their descendants and the indigenous British groups (who adopted many aspects of Anglo-Saxon culture and language) became the group. They established the Kingdom of England; the modern English language owes almost half of its words-including the most common words of everyday speech-to their language

The establishment of various Anglo-Saxon kingdoms and many shires in the 5th and 6th centuries (conventionally identified as seven kingdoms: Northumbria, Mercia, East Anglia, Essex, Kent, Sussex, and Wessex) and their Christianization during the 7th century changed in 927 when it was united as the Kingdom of England by King Æthelstan… it became part of the short-lived North Sea Empire of Cnut the Great, a personal union between England, Denmark and Norway in the 11th century

The threat of Viking invasions and Danish settlers and the gradual unification of England under the Wessex hegemony during the 9th and 10th centuries ended with the Norman conquest of England by William the Conqueror at the Battle of Hastings in 1066

The Shires of Britain
The Shires of Britain are held here for the timeframe

The term "Shire" is a traditional name for a division of land, found in Great Britain, Australia, New Zealand as well as some other English-speaking countries

The word "shire" derives from the Old English "scir" which is from the Proto-Germanic "skizo" (Old High German "scira"), denoting an "official charge," a "district under a governor" and a "care"

It was first used in the Kingdom of Wessex from the beginning of Anglo-Saxon settlement, and spread to most of the rest of England in the tenth century, along with the West Saxon kingdom's political domination

The Domesday event (in 1086) divided the city of York into shires and the first shires of Scotland were created in English-settled areas such as Lothian and the Borders, in the ninth century--King David I more consistently created shires and appointed sheriffs across lowland shores of Scotland

A shire in the early days was governed by an "ealdorman" and in the later Anglo-Saxon period by a royal official known as a "shire reeve" or sheriff. The shires were divided into "hundreds" or "wapentakes," although other less common sub-divisions also existed. An alternative name for a shire was a "sheriffdom" until sheriff court reforms separated the two concepts

The phrase "shire county" applies, unofficially, to non-metropolitan counties in England, specifically those that are not local unitary authority areas. In Scotland the word "county" was not adopted for the shires. Although "county" appears in some texts, "shire" was the normal name until counties for statutory purposes were created in the nineteenth century. In Ireland "shire" was not used for the counties

In most cases, the "shire town" is the seat of the shire's government, or was historically. Sometimes the nomenclature exists even where "county" is used in place of "shire" as in, for instance, Kentville in Nova Scotia

Across the UK, a shire became synonymous with a county, an administrative term introduced to England through the Norman Conquest, in A.D. 1066

In contemporary British usage, the word "counties" also refers to "shires", mainly in places, such as Shire Hall

A few UK counties were archaically known with a "shire" (Devon, Dorset, Rutland and Somerset)--these were dropped at various points while many others have retained the term (Gloucestershire, Hampshire, Yorkshire, etc). Hexhamshire was a county in the north-east of England from the early 12th century until 1572, when it was incorporated into Northumberland. Essex, Kent, and Sussex never bore a -shire suffix, as each represented a former Anglo-Saxon kingdom; similarly Cornwall was a British kingdom before it became an English county. The term "shire" was also never used in the names of the six traditional counties of Northern Ireland

Framingham Earl, Norfolkshire, England (Medieval), Europe (52° 34' 4.86" N, 1° 20' 59.91" E)
Framingham Earl is a small village situated south of Norwich, in the English county of Norfolk

The village has two churches, the Methodist Church and the Church of St. Andrew

St. Andrew's is one of 124 existing round-tower churches in Norfolk. The plan of the church is beguilingly irregular, with the chancel decreasing in width towards the east end. A pilaster strip in the south wall of the chancel curiously tapers with the narrow portion at the bottom: the whole building has a gnarled, irregular appearance which is a mark of Anglo-Saxon construction. Even the corners (quoins) are of flint, although these are somewhat larger on the whole than those built into the body of the walls. There is even, surprisingly, an attempt at herringbone-work, all in flint, and round splayed porthole windows dressed entirely in flints, not quite perfect circles

France (Medieval), Europe (48° 41' 27.46" N, 9° 8' 26.25" E)
In the Medieval years, the name "France" (Latin "Francia") was derived from tribes called the Franks\

Feudalism flourished in medieval Europe in the 9th to 15th century. A system of legal, military and social customs defining the relationship of holding land in lieu of services or labor. Feudalism was the result of the decentralization of the Carolingian Empire. As a result, soldiers secured a system to rule over their lands with powers encompassing the judicial, political, economic and social domains

When the Roman Empire collapsed, France was entirely unlinked from the European economy. There was a great decline in trade and manors became more self-sufficient than progressive. During the 13th century, catastrophes and famines plagued the French people

The tribes of France during the early medieval period were not very organized. Most of these men were hunters and trappers. Feudalism was used by the Normans in France from the time they first settled in the region and it was a simple and effective system of control. All the lands were owned by the King and some were given to the church while the rest were leased out to Barons and Lords under strict agreement that they will provide services to the king in exchange to the lands leased out to them. A quarter of the land was kept by the King as his personal property and he has complete control over the system

Germany (The Federal Republic of Germany), Europe

The Federal Republic of Germany is a large country in Europe today, covering an area of 357,022 square kilometres (137,847 sq. miles); it lies between the Baltic sea, the North sea to the north, and the Alps to the south. It borders Denmark to the north, Poland and the Czech Republic to the east, Austria and Switzerland to the south, and France, Luxembourg, Belgium, and the Netherlands to the west

Various Germanic tribes inhabited the northern parts of modern Germany since classical antiquity; a region named "Germania" was documented before AD 100. Several Germanic-speaking settlements are in this tree: Bayern, Mensleben, Rhineland (Rheineck), Sachsen, Suabia and Wendland, events there ranging from 450 to 895

Beginning in the 10th century, German territories formed a central part of the Holy Roman Empire. The historic creation of the settlements of German-speaking peoples across Central & Eastern Europe cover an extensive period, dating back to the departure of the Roman Empire in the early 300's; populations in these parts of Europe are commonly referred to as "Volksdeutsche" (German; translated "people whose language and culture had German origins, but who did not hold German citizenship")

The presence of the German-speaking populations is rooted in centuries of history, with the settling in northeastern Europe of Germanic peoples predating even the founding of the Roman Empire. The presence of the independent German states in the region (particularly Prussia "Preußen"), and later the German Empire and also in other multi-ethnic countries, such as Austria-Hungary, Poland, Imperial Russia, etc., demonstrates the extent and duration of German-speaking settlements

Central Europe underwent dramatic changes after the Roman Empire had lost its dominant position. The Franks created an empire that, besides former Roman Gaul, united the former West Germanic-speaking peoples and adopted Christianity. East Francia, an early predecessor of Germany, aimed to be the successor to the Christian Western Roman Empire, developed into the Holy Roman Empire. In Scandinavia, the former North Germanic-speaking peoples entered the Viking Age, affecting the whole of Europe through trade and raids. Some former East Germanic-speaking peoples had entered and merged into Rome, their own culture ceasing to exist. At the same time Slav states arose and became dominant in Eastern Europe and large parts of Central Europe

With the break-up of the Frankish empire in 843, Germany emerges as separate realm, becoming a country in the early 900's that in turn becomes a part of the Holy Roman Empire less than a hundred years later. It then changes to the Confederation of the Rhine in 1800 and (with growth and contraction) is renamed as the Post Holy Roman Empire States. Prussia ("Preußen") was created during this time in 1500

"Ostsiedlung" (German, literally "east settling" / translated "the German eastward expansion") was the medieval eastward migration and settlement of Germanic-speaking peoples from the Holy Roman Empire, especially its southern and western portions, into less-populated regions of Central Europe, parts of west Eastern Europe, and the Baltics. The affected area roughly stretched from Estonia in the north all the way to Slovenia in the south and extended into Transylvania (today in Romania) in the east. In part, Ostsiedlung followed the territorial expansion of the Empire and the Teutonic Order

Before and during the time of Germanic settlement, late medieval Central and Eastern European societies underwent deep cultural changes in demography, religion, law and administration, agriculture, settlement numbers and structures. Thus Ostsiedlung is part of a process termed Ostkolonisation ("east colonization") or Hochmittelalterlicher Landesausbau ("high medieval land consolidation"), although these terms are sometimes used synonymously

During the 16th century, northern German regions became the centre of the Protestant Reformation

After the collapse of the Holy Roman Empire, the German Confederation was formed in 1815. In 1871, Germany became a nation state with the Post-Holy Roman Empire States, Prussia ("Preußen") and others, and become known as the North German Confederation. After World War I & the subsequent German Revolution of 1918–1919, the Holy Roman Empire was replaced by the parliamentary Weimar Republic

The Nazi seizure of power in 1933 led to the establishment of a dictatorship by Adolf Hitler, the 2nd World War and the Holocaust… Germany had numerous POW camps during WWII, where a significant part of Hitler's global dominance plan was deployed with 6 million Jewish people executed in the gas chambers

After being crushed in Berlin in May of 1945 by the US miliary, the UK forces (including Australia, Canada, etc) and the USSR, there was a period of Allied occupation. Germany was then split on the 7th of October in 1949 into West & East Germany; the West went back to being a part of Europe and the East became part of the USSR. A wall was erected in Berlin and laid out as fences from the Baltic sea in the north to the Alps in the south; there were mines and guard stations all along the division

Don was stationed in Soltau from 1973 through 1976, part of the defense line against the USSR; he took his family in 1985 to the East/West fence (see details in the trip page https://donshave.website/Home/Europe%20Trip%201985/Europe%20Trip%201985.html)

The country was reunified on October 3rd, 1990, becoming today's Federal Republic of Germany. A few years earlier on June 12th, 1987, President Reagan's "Berlin Wall Speech" had said to the world "Mr. Gorbachev, tear down this wall!" He was the General Secretary of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union… this was the actual cause of the reunification

The Federal Republic of Germany is a founding member of the European Economic Community and the European Union

Glamis, Angus County, Scotland (MiddleAges part of Anglo-Saxon Britain), Europe

The vicinity of Glamis has prehistoric traces-within the village there stands an intricately carved Pictish stone known as the Glamis Manse Stone. There are various other Pictish stones nearby the village, such as the Hunter Hill Stone, and the Eassie Stone, which stands in the nearby village of Eassie

The last Alpínid king of Scotland, Malcolm II, died at Glamis in 1034

On 20 October 1491 it was declared a burgh of barony by King James IV which gave Glamis the right to hold a weekly market, and an annual fair which was held on 17 November, the feast day of Saint Fergus. This legacy can be seen in the mercat cross which still stands in the village square

Various spellings for Glamis are scattered throughout the tree; all should point to here.

> Glastonbury Abbey is a ruined monastery in Glastonbury, Somerset, England, a grade I listed building and scheduled ancient monument--open as a visitor attraction
> The abbey was founded in the 8th century and enlarged in the 10th. It was destroyed by a major fire in 1184, but subsequently rebuilt and by the 14th century was one of the richest and most powerful monasteries in England. The abbey controlled large tracts of the surrounding land and was instrumental in major drainage projects on the Somerset Levels. The abbey was suppressed during the Dissolution of the Monasteries under King Henry VIII of England. The last abbot, Richard Whiting (Whyting), was hanged, drawn and quartered as a traitor on Glastonbury Tor in 1539
> From at least the 12th century the Glastonbury area has been associated with the legend of King Arthur, a connection promoted by medieval monks who asserted that Glastonbury was Avalon. Christian legends have claimed that the abbey was founded by Joseph of Arimathea in the 1st century

Guinea-Bissau, West Africa, Africa
Guinea-Bissau, officially the Republic of Guinea-Bissau is a country in West Africa; it borders Senegal to the north and Guinea to the south-east. It was once part of the kingdom of Kaabu, as well as part of the Mali Empire

Originally in Don's research, this was called "Ginne"

Parts of this kingdom persisted until the 18th century, while a few others were under some rule by the Portuguese Empire since the 16th century. In the 19th century, it was colonized as Portuguese Guinea

Upon independence, declared in 1973 and recognised in 1974, the name of its capital, Bissau, was added to the country's name to prevent confusion with Guinea (formerly French Guinea). Guinea-Bissau has a history of political instability since independence

Haddam, Middlesex County, Colony of Connecticut, British Colonial America (North America) (41° 28' 37.99" N, 72° 30' 45.00" W)

The Town of Haddam is today located in Middlesex County, in the south-central part of Connecticut in the lower Connecticut River Valley. Middletown and East Hampton border the town to the north, East Haddam to the east, Chester and Killingworth to the south, and Killingworth and Durham to the west. With approximately 7,200 residents (2000 census) the town covers 46.7 square miles

Haddam has the distinction of being the only town in the state of Connecticut that is bisected by the Connecticut River, with residents on both sides; Haddam and Higganum are on the west side and Haddam Neck is on the east side

In 1660 the Connecticut Colonial Legislature sent Matthew Allyn and Samuel Willys down the Connecticut River from Hartford to purchase land from the Wangunk Indian Tribe at the place the English called "Land of Thirty Mile Island"… there are two schools of thought on how the place got its name: 1) early historians write that the earliest settlers thought the island was thirty miles from the mouth of the "Grate River" at Long Island Sound (it is only 17 miles from the mouth of river) and 2) it is also plausible that the Island got its name because it is 30 miles down river from Hartford and the town was settled by men from the Hartford area

In May 1662 the Englishmen finally purchased land comprising approximately 104 square miles and extending in six miles on each side of the river from the straits at "Pattyquonck" (now Chester) to the Mattabeseck-Mill River (now Middletown) across to the line of Chatham (now East Hampton). They paid 30 coats (worth approximately $100 at that time) for the land to four Native American chiefs, two queens and others. The Native Americans did set aside some property for their own use including 40 acres at Cove Meadow (Chester) and Haddam Island as well reserving the right to hunt and fish where they pleased

Hanover, Plymouth County, The Province of Massachusetts Bay, British Colonial America (North America) (42° 6' 47.02" N, 70° 48' 45.00" W)
Hanover in Plymouth County of The Province of Massachusetts Bay in British Colonial America is today an inland town NW of Plymouth that was first settled by English settlers in 1649 when William Barstow, a farmer, built a bridge along the North River at what is now Washington Street

The land was the westernmost portion of the town of Scituate, and it would officially separate and be incorporated as a town June 14, 1727. The name "Hanover" is probably a tribute to King George I, the first Hanoverian King of Great Britain; while George I died on June 11, 1727, the reports would not have reached the colonies until after the town's incorporation

Hatfield, County of Hampshire, The Colony of Massachusetts Bay, British Colonial America (North America) (42° 22' 14.99" N, 72° 35' 55.00" W)

Hatfield, Colonial County of Hampshire, The Colony of Massachusetts Bay, British Colonial America is a town that is far inland from the Cape Cod Bay. It was founded in 1660 on land granted to General Daniel Dennison and Governor William Bradford. It was formally incorporated as a town in 1670 and has a board of selectmen and an annual town meeting

One of the theories of Hatfield's incorporation in 1670 was that during that time it was a colony of Hadley and Hadley's church was located across the Connecticut River on what's now West Street in present day Hadley. The citizens living in what is now Hatfield asked the officials if they could build the church on this side of the river, so that they can go to church and not have to cross the river, which was hard to cross every week, especially during the winter season when the river would freeze. When the citizens asked main Hadley, Hadley said "No." Enraged, they held a vote on whether Hatfield would still remain territory of Hadley, or secede into its own town. The vote for seceding won. Many believed this was a good decision as during that time, travel wasn't easy, and it was very unusual for the already large Hadley which had already claimed many of its surrounding towns to have a spot on the other side of the river

As a center for agriculture the region produced cattle, sheep, corn, and tobacco. At first their relations with the local Native Americans were very welcoming on both sides. On October 16, 1675, a substantial part of the town was destroyed in King Philip's War, and surviving settlers sought refuge in Springfield. On September 19, 1677, another raid occurred, killing thirteen

During the American Revolution, Hatfield was an important source of supplies and men for the rebels. In 1786 the town was used as an assembly area for the discontented who became involved in Shays' Rebellion

One family supplied many of Hatfield's physicians for generations. The Hastings family, descendants of English Puritan immigrant Thomas Hastings, was originally settled at Watertown, but within a generation members of the family had relocated to Hatfield, where they produced a succession of Hatfield physicians, including Dr. Thomas Hastings (1652–1712); Dr. Thomas Hastings (1679–1728); Dr. Wait still Hastings (1714–1748); and Dr. John Hastings (1765–1845). The first Thomas Hastings, aside from serving as physician to Hatfield and surrounding communities, was also the town's first schoolteacher. He authored a contemporary account of the devastating Indian attack on nearby Deerfield in 1704

Hatfield was the birthplace and hometown of Sophia Smith (1796–1870), the founder of both Smith Academy (the Hatfield public high school), and Smith College, the famous women's college in Northampton. Another notable resident was Rebecca Dickinson (1738–1812), a never-married gown maker whose surviving diary, preserved in the collections of the Pocumtuck Valley Memorial Association in Deerfield, has served as the basis for scholarship in early American women's history

    Kronborg Castle
    Kronborg is a castle and stronghold in the town of Helsingør, Denmark and is situated on the extreme northeastern tip of the island of Zealand at the narrowest point of the Øresund, the sound between present Denmark and the provinces of present Sweden that were also Danish at the time the castle was built. In this part, the sound is only 4 kilometres (2.5 mi) wide, hence the strategic importance of maintaining a coastal fortification at this location commanding one of the few outlets of the Baltic Sea

    The castle's story dates back to a stronghold, Krogen, built by King Eric VII in the 1420s. Along with the fortress Kärnan in Helsingborg on the opposite coast of Øresund, it controlled the entranceway to the Baltic Sea. From 1574 to 1585, King Frederick II had the medieval fortress radically transformed into a magnificent Renaissance castle. The main architects were the Flemings Hans Hendrik van Paesschen and Anthonis van Obbergen, whereas the sculptural work was coordinated by Gert van Groningen

In 1629, a fire destroyed much of the castle, but King Christian IV subsequently had it rebuilt. The castle also has a church within its walls. In 1658, Kronborg was besieged and captured by the Swedes who took many of its valuable art treasures as war booty. In 1785 the castle ceased to be a royal residence and was converted into barracks for the Army. The Army left the castle in 1923, and after a thorough renovation it was opened to the public

Immortalized as Elsinore in William Shakespeare's play Hamlet, Kronborg is one of the most important Renaissance castles in Northern Europe and was inscribed on the UNESCO's World Heritage List in 2000

Hingham, County of Suffolk, The Plymouth Colony (West of the Cape Cod Bay), British Colonial America (North America)
The town of Hingham was dubbed as "Bare Cove" by the first colonizing English in 1633, but two years later was incorporated as a town under the name Hingham. The town was named for a village in the English county of Norfolk, East Anglia, whence most of the first colonists came, including Abraham Lincoln's ancestor Samuel Lincoln (1622–90), his first American ancestor, who came to Massachusetts in 1637

The land on which Hingham was settled was deeded to the English by the Wampanoag sachem Wompatuck in 1655

The town was within Suffolk County from its founding in 1643 until 1803, and then in Plymouth County from 1803 to the present. The eastern part of the town split off to become Cohasset in 1770

A statue of President Lincoln adorns the area adjacent to downtown Hingham Square

Ingolstadt, Bavaria, Germanic Holy Roman Empire, Europe

Ingolstadt is a city to the north of Munich in Bavaria, Germany; Kreuztor, a 14th-century gate and the city emblem, is the entrance to the medieval old town. It was first mentioned in a document of Charlemagne on 6 February 806 as "Ingoldes stat", the place of Ingold. Circa 1250, Ingolstadt was granted city status. Ingolstadt was the capital of the Duchy of Bavaria-Ingolstadt between 1392 and 1447 and was then united with Bavaria-Landshut. Louis VII, Duke of Bavaria ordered the building of the New Castle, whose form was strongly influenced by French Gothic architecture

In 1472 Louis IX, Duke of Bavaria founded the University of Ingolstadt which became the Ludwig-Maximilians-University. In 1800 it was moved to Landshut and in 1826 eventually to Munich. The University of Ingolstadt was an important defender of the Roman Catholic Church during the Reformation era, led by such notable scholars as Johann Eck

[https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/History_of_Ireland]

The earliest known evidence of human presence in Ireland dates to about 12,500 years ago. The receding of the ice after the Younger Dryas cold phase of the Quaternary around 9700 BC heralds the beginning of Prehistoric Ireland, which includes the archaeological periods known as the Mesolithic, the Neolithic from about 4000 BC, the Copper and Bronze Age from about 2300 BC and Iron Age beginning about 600 BC. Ireland's bronze age begins with the emergence of "protohistoric" Gaelic Ireland in the 2nd Millennium BC and ends with arrival of Celtic la Tène culture by central Europe

Medieval Ireland existed from about 590 to 1536, when Henry II's son John was made Lord of Ireland.

History of Ireland (400–800)
The early medieval history of Ireland (often called Early Christian Ireland) spans the 5th to 7th centuries, from the gradual emergence out of the protohistoric period (Ogham inscriptions in Primitive Irish, mentions Greco-Roman ethnography) to the beginning of the Viking Age. The period notably includes the Hiberno-Scottish mission of Christianized Ireland to regions of pagan Britain and the spread of Irish cultural influence to Continental Europe

History of Ireland (800–1169)
This period is from the first Viking raids to the Norman invasion.
The first two centuries of this period are characterized by Viking raids and the subsequent Norse settlements along the coast. Viking ports were established at Dublin, Wexford, Waterford, Cork and Limerick, which became the first large towns in Ireland. Ireland at that time consisted of many semi-independent túatha, and during the entire period, attempts were made by various factions to gain political control over the whole of the island. For the first two centuries of this period, this was mainly a rivalry between putative High Kings of Ireland from the northern and southern branches of the Uí Néill. The one who came closest to being de facto king over the whole of Ireland, however, was Brian Boru, the first high king in this period not belonging to the Uí Néill. Following Brian's death at the Battle of Clontarf in 1014, the political situation became more complex with rivalry for high kingship from several clans and dynasties. Brian's descendants failed to maintain a unified throne, and regional squabbling over territory led indirectly to the invasion of the Norman's under Richard de Clare in 1169

History of Ireland (1169–1536)
This period is from the arrival of the Cambro-Norman's to the reign of Henry II of England, who made his son, Prince John, Lord of Ireland.
After the Norman invasions of 1169 and 1171, Ireland was under an alternating level of control from Norman lords and the King of England. Previously, Ireland had seen intermittent warfare between provincial kingdoms over the position of High King. This situation was transformed by intervention in these conflicts by Norman mercenaries and later the English crown. After their successful conquest of England, the Norman's turned their attention to Ireland. Ireland was made a Lordship of the King of England and much of its land was seized by Norman barons. With time, Hiberno-Norman rule shrank to a territory known as the Pale, stretching from Dublin to Dundalk. The Hiberno-Norman lords elsewhere in the country became Gaelicised and integrated in Gaelic society

Ireland became a more-or-less independent country in 1534 with the Tudor conquest of Ireland.

Northern Ireland (Irish: Tuaisceart Éireann / Ulster-Scots: Norlin Airlann) is variously described as a country, province or region which is today a part of the United Kingdom. It is located in the northeast of the island of Ireland, and shares a border to the south and west with the Republic of Ireland

Six counties (Antrim, Armagh, Down, Fermanagh, Londonderry and Tyrone) and two local urban county boroughs, Derry (geographically part of the County of Londonderry) and Belfast (geographically split between the counties of Antrim and Down) were split off as N. Ireland in May 3rd, 1921…

this was merged into the United Kingdom in 1922 along with England, Scotland and Wales

Koscierzyna County, Pomerania, Poland, Europe
    Koscierzyna
Koscierzyna (Americanized to Koscierzyna) is a town in Gdansk Pomerania, northern Poland, approximately 50 kilometres (31 miles) south-west of Gdansk and Tricity and 190 km (118 mi) south-west of Kaliningrad, at a height of 163 m (535 ft) above sea level. With some 24,000 inhabitants today, it has been the capital of Koscierzyna County in Pomeranian Voivodeship since 1999; previously it was in Gdansk Voivodeship from 1975 to 1998

History
The history of the town dates back to the end of the 13th century. The oldest known mention comes from a document from 1284. In 1346 it was granted municipal rights, and in 1398 the settlement obtained the status of a town. The town's name comes from the Old Polish word ko?cierz, which means "thicket"

Koscierzyna was part of medieval Poland, until, in 1310, it was annexed by the Monastic State of the Teutonic Knights. After the Second Peace of Thorn (1466), the town became part of the Kingdom of Poland again

Administratively it was part of the Pomeranian Voivodeship, located in the provinces of Royal Prussia and Greater Poland. It was the seat of local Polish starosts.[1] Koscierzyna was a small town, whose inhabitants made a living from trade, crafts and farming

The town suffered many times from fire. In 1463 it was first plundered and thereafter burned down completely by Poles during the Thirteen Years' War. In 1626, during the Polish–Swedish War (1626–29), it was completely burned down once more. During the years 1646, 1663 and 1669 it partly burned down, and in 1709 again, entirely

The "Sokól" Polish Gymnastic Society in Koscierzyna
In the First Partition of Poland in 1772 the town was annexed by Kingdom of Prussia and was administratively in the newly formed province of

West Prussia, where it remained until 1919. The town was subjected to anti-Polish policies, including Germanisation

During the Kashubian diaspora, many families from Koscierzyna, such as the Mrozeks, the Pellowskis and the Eichmans emigrated to the area of Winona, Minnesota, in the United States, beginning in 1859

Despite Germanisation policies, the town was a center of Polish activity in the 19th century. In 1863, volunteers set out from the town to fight in the Polish January Uprising in the Russian Partition of Poland, but few managed to cross the Prussian-Russian border, while many were imprisoned by Prussians

Around 1900, the town had one Protestant church, one Catholic church, a synagogue, a high school, an academy for school teachers, a factory for the production of snuff, several breweries, a refinery, various mills, agriculture and forestry

In the late 19th and early 20th century Poles founded various organizations, including the "Sokól" Polish Gymnastic Society, reading rooms, Bank Ludowy ("People's Bank"), and the Kashubian newspaper Gryf began publishing; writer and activist Aleksander Majkowski was active in the town

After Poland regained independence after World War I in 1918, the Polish population made efforts to reintegrate the town with Poland. In January 1919, the Germans sent a unit of 120 soldiers to the town to prevent the outbreak of a Polish uprising. Local activist Tomasz Rogala, who co-founded a secret Polish independence organization, went to the peace conference in Versailles, where he demanded to include the town in reborn Poland

Koscierzyna was finally reintegrated with the Second Polish Republic in January 1920; construction of the Polish Coal Trunk-Line in the interbellum contributed to the prosperity of Koscierzyna, as the town gained a modern railway connection with Gdynia, Bydgoszcz and Upper Silesia

Deverill Longbridge
Georgian Era

Longbridge Deverill, Wiltshire, England (United Kingdom), Europe (51° 9' 30.81" N, 2° 12' 0.79" W)

Longbridge Deverill (also listed as Deverill Longbridge) is a village and a civil parish in the Deverill valley which carries the upper waters of the River Wylye

The parish includes Crockerton and the hamlets of Crockerton Green, Fox Holes and Hill Deverill; these settlements are collectively known as the Lower Deverills (the Upper Deverills being the upstream villages of Brixton Deverill, Monkton Deverill and Kingston Deverill)

The River Wylye runs through all three villages; it is located 19 miles from the Roman city of Bath and twenty miles from the medieval city of Salisbury

Evidence of Neolithic settlement includes a henge near Long Ivor Farm in the northeast of the parish; a Bronze Age bell barrow also stands on a slope of Rook Hill in the southeast. Iron Age settlements include a site on high ground at Cow Down in the east of the parish, where there are foundations of a large circular hut. Two Roman roads crossed at Kingston Deverill; a short length of a north-south road, probably a section of the route from Bath to Poole, survives on Brimsdown Hill and became part of the boundary with Maiden Bradley parish

Land at Longbridge and Crockerton belonged to Glastonbury Abbey from the 10th century. Two estates were recorded in the 1086 Domesday Book at Devrel, with altogether 24 households. The manor house at Hill Deverill dates from the 16th century and is Grade II listed. The medieval village of Hill Deverill was to the west of the manor house. A hollow way, field boundaries and house platforms survive

In 1655, Sir James Thynne provided a terrace of three two-storey almshouses southeast of the Longbridge Deverill church, built in rubble stone with slate roofs. A wooden clock face projects from the gable facing the main road. In the 19th century a shortage of employment led to emigration to America, Canada or Australia; 181 people left from Longbridge. Pottery was made at Crockerton from locally-dug clay, until the industry declined in the 19th century. Crockerton also had a cloth mill, later a silk mill, which closed in 1894

Lynchburg (Independent City), Campbell County, Virginia, United States (North America)

Lynchburg city is administratively independent and located in both Campbell and Bedford counties, south-central Virginia

It is situated on the James River in the foothills of the Blue Ridge Mountains. The city grew from a ferry landing settled in 1757 by Quakers; it was named for John Lynch, the ferry operator who owned the original town site. During the American Revolution, John's patriot brother, Charles, set up an irregular court and imposed savage penalties on Tories, giving rise to the expressions "lynch law" and lynching

The town flourished after the James River and Kanawha Canal (1840) connected it with Richmond, Virginia, 110 miles (177 km) east and after the arrival of the railroad in 1852. During the American Civil War, Lynchburg was a Confederate supply base and the scene of General Jubal A. Early's victory over General David Hunter's Union troops (June 1864); the restored Fort Early commemorates the event. Old City Cemetery holds the graves of more than 2,000 Confederate soldiers

Following the war, Lynchburg developed as a shoe- and iron-manufacturing centre. Its importance as a market for dark tobacco (for chewing and cigars) decreased with the increased use of bright tobacco (for cigarettes). Lynchburg's modern economy includes manufacturing (textiles, steel products, and pharmaceuticals) and agriculture (tobacco, corn [maize], and other grains)

The city is the seat of Virginia University of Lynchburg (1888; Baptist), Randolph-Macon Woman's College (1891; Methodist), Lynchburg College (1903; Disciples of Christ), Central Virginia Community College (1966), and Liberty University (1971). Nearby are Appomattox Court House National Historic Park (1935) and Thomas Jefferson's Poplar Forest, which was designated a national historic landmark in 1984

    Heleigh Castle of Aldithley
    Heleigh Castle of Aldithley, near Heighley Castle (also "Heleigh") is today a ruined medieval castle to the north of the Davies M. Farm (named "Heighley Castle Farm") on Heighley Castle Lane, about a mile (as the crow-flies) north of Madeley, Staffordshire

    The castle was built by Henry de Aldithley (c.1175-1246) (later "de Audley"), Sheriff of Shropshire 1227-1232, and was completed in 1233…one of their ancestral homes for over 300 years

    It was held for Charles I during the English Civil War and was destroyed by Parliamentary forces in the 1640s

    The ruinous remains comprise masonry fragments, mostly overgrown by vegetation. The site is protected by Grade II listed building status and is a Scheduled Ancient Monument

    The castle is today privately owned and is not open to visitors; it is on Historic England's Heritage at Risk Register and described as being in 'very bad' condition

Manchester is a large city in the county of Greater Manchester, the fifth most populous English district. It is in the west of England and is fringed by the Cheshire Plain to the south, the Pennines to the north and east, and an arc of towns with which it forms a continuous conurbation. The local authority for the city is the Manchester City Council

The recorded history of Manchester began with the civilian settlement associated with the Roman fort of "Mamucium", which was established in AD 79 on a sandstone bluff near the confluence of the rivers Medlock and Irwell. The name originated from the Latin name of Mamucium (or its variant Mancunio); the citizens are still referred to as Mancunians. The name is generally thought to represent a Latinisation of an original Brittonic name; the generally accepted etymology is that it comes from the Brittonic "mamm-" ("breast", in reference to a "breast-like hill"). However, more recent work suggests that it could have come from "mamma" ("mother", in reference to a local river goddess). Both usages are preserved in Insular Celtic languages, such as "mam" meaning "breast" in Irish and "mother" in Welsh. The suffix "-chester" is from an Old English ceaster ("Roman fortification", itself a loanword from Latin castra, "fort; fortified town")

It is historically a part of Lancashire, although areas of Cheshire south of the River Mersey were incorporated in the 20th century. The first to be included, Wythenshawe, was added to the city in 1931. Throughout the Middle Ages Manchester remained a manorial township, but began to expand "at an astonishing rate" around the turn of the 19th century. Manchester's unplanned urbanization was brought on by a boom in textile manufacture during the Industrial Revolution, and resulted in it becoming the world's first industrialized city. Manchester achieved city status in 1853. The Manchester Ship Canal opened in 1894, creating the Port of Manchester and directly linking the city to the Irish Sea, 36 miles (58 km) to the west. Its fortune declined after the Second World War, owing to deindustrialization, but the IRA bombing in 1996 led to extensive investment and regeneration

In 1885, Bradford, Harpurhey, Rusholme and parts of Moss Side and Withington townships became part of the City of Manchester and 4 years later became a county borough (likely Manchester County) as did many larger Lancashire towns, and were therefore no longer governed by Lancashire County Council. Between 1890 and 1933, more areas were added to the city which had been administered by Lancashire County Council, including former villages such as Burnage, Chorlton-cum-Hardy, Didsbury, Fallowfield, Levenshulme, Longsight, and Withington

In 1931, the Cheshire civil parishes of Baguley, Northenden and Northen Etchells from the south of the River Mersey were added

In 1974, by way of the Local Government Act 1972, the City of Manchester became a metropolitan district of the metropolitan county of Greater Manchester

That year, Ringway, the village where the Manchester Airport is located, was added to the City

Marshfield, Plymouth County, The Plymouth Colony (West of the Cape Cod Bay), British Colonial America (North America)
Marshfield is a town on the west coast of the Cape Cod Bay and sits to the north of Duxbury and to the south of Scituate. It is an early Pilgrim town, originally part of the "New Colony of New Plimoth in New England" which was established in 1620. Marshfield retains some of its historic character throughout its several quaint villages

Native Americans lived in Marshfield for thousands of years before the white settlers came including members of the Wampanoag Tribe of the Algonquin nation and members of the Massachusetts Tribe; evidence of habitation extends back 10,000 B.C. The Wampanoag name for the area is "Missacautucket." The earliest English settlers became allies of the Wampanoags, due in part to a strong friendship formed between Chief Massasoit and Edward Winslow. That alliance lasted 40 years

After Massasoit's death in 1661, his son Wamsutta succeeded him as Sachem of the Wampanoags. However, Wamsutta died under suspicious circumstances in 1662. After a visit to the home of Governor Josiah Winslow in Marshfield he suddenly collapsed and died. Wamsutta was succeeded as Sachem by his brother Metacomet, who was known to the English as King Philip. Metacomet grew increasingly resentful of the colonists after the mysterious death of his brother. These resentments led to King Philip's War. Governor Josiah Winslow of Marshfield commanded the colonial forces against the Native Americans during that brutal war. While nearby towns, including adjoining Scituate, were attacked during King Philip's War,

Marshfield was spared. Subsequent to the victory of the colonists in King Philip's War, Native Americans had a limited presence in Marshfield

Marshfield was first established as a separate settlement in 1632 by Edward Winslow, a Mayflower Pilgrim who became a governor of Plymouth Colony and was the third signatory to the Mayflower Compact. He became a negotiator and diplomat for the Colony in its dealings with the Native Americans and with the British. He also established the first church and the first school in the town, near the cemetery which today still bears the Winslow name

Medfield, County of Old Norfolk, The Colony of Massachusetts Bay, British Colonial America (North America)
"Old Norfolk County" was one of the original four counties created in the Massachusetts Bay Colony. The land was originally granted as separate from Massachusetts, but boundary disputes among the settlers led to their petitioning to join the colonial government to the south. It was created by the Massachusetts General Court on May 10, 1643, when it was ordered "that the whole plantation within this jurisdiction be divided into four shires"

The county contained the settlements of Salisbury, Hampton, Haverhill, Exeter, Dover, and Portsmouth and it effectively encompassed all settlements from north of the Merrimack River to the Piscataqua River, and extending inland (west) about a dozen miles

In 1680, the Province of New Hampshire was formally separated from Massachusetts, with Norfolk County forming the core

The current Norfolk county was created on March 26, 1793 by legislation signed by Gov. John Hancock. Most of the towns were originally part of Suffolk County, Massachusetts. The towns of Dorchester and Roxbury were part of Norfolk County when it was created but, as Boston annexed each town, they became part of Suffolk County again. Hingham and Hull were originally part of the Norfolk County legislation but petitioned to remain in Suffolk county and in June 1793 their removal to Norfolk county was repealed

[See Suffolk county notes]
Medfield, County of Old Norfolk, The Province of Massachusetts Bay, British Colonial America (North America)
Medfield, County of Suffolk, The Colony of Massachusetts Bay, British Colonial America (North America)
Suffolk county was created by the Massachusetts General Court on May 10, 1643, when it was ordered "that the whole plantation within this jurisdiction be divided into four shires". Suffolk initially contained Boston, Roxbury, Dorchester, Dedham, Braintree, Weymouth, and Hingham; it was named after Suffolk, England, which means "southern folk."

The county evolved over time, splitting repeatedly

In 1731, the extreme western portions of Suffolk County, which included Uxbridge, were split off to become part of Worcester County

In 1793, most of the original Suffolk County (including Milton) except for Boston, Chelsea, Hingham, and Hull (which remained in Suffolk) split off and became Norfolk County

Hingham and Hull would leave Suffolk County and join Plymouth County in 1803

Revere was set off from Chelsea and incorporated in 1846 and Winthrop was set off from Revere and incorporated in 1852

In the late 19th century and early 20th century, Boston annexed several adjacent cities and towns including Hyde Park, Roxbury, West Roxbury, and Dorchester from Norfolk County and Charlestown and Brighton from Middlesex County, resulting in an enlargement of Suffolk County.

Merthyr Tydfil, Merthyr Tydfil County Borough, Wales (United Kingdom), Europe

Merthyr Tydfil is the county town of the Merthyr Tydfil County Borough which has been one of the 22 unitary authorities in Wales since 1 April 1996 (though the area was actually originally granted county borough status in 1908)

The county is located in the historic county of Glamorgan and takes its name from the Merthyr Tydfil town

The County Borough consists of the northern part of the Taff Valley and the smaller neighbouring Taff Bargoed Valley. It borders the counties of Rhondda Cynon Taf and Caerphilly county borough

A horrendously sad fact that I remember clearly was on October 21st, 1966 when a mining tip on a mountain slope above the village of Aberfan (5 miles south of Merthyr Tydfil) collapsed after a heavy rain and slid downhill as a slurry, killing 116 children and 28 adults as it engulfed Pantglas Junior School and other buildings. Messines, Flanders, Belgium, Europe

Messines (French, Mesen in Belgian) was the location of the Battle of Messines in June 1917, a British victory during World War I. The capture of Messines Ridge was a preliminary operation that took place just prior to the Battle of Passchendaele (Third Battle of Ypres). High-explosive mines placed under the German lines were used to devastating effect, and the blast from the explosions could be heard in London some 130 miles (209 km) distant

New York City is the most populous city in the United States with an estimated 2018 population of 8.3 million people over 300+ making it the most densely populated major city in the United States

Located at the southern tip of New York state, the city is the center of the New York Metropolitan Area, the largest metropolitan area in the world by urban landmass with 23 million people in its areas

New Amsterdam ("Nieuw Amsterdam" in Dutch) was a 17th-century Dutch settlement. The "factory" (a trading post) was strategically established at the southern tip of Manhattan Island, meant to defend the fur trade operations of the Dutch West India Company in the North River (Hudson River), and went on to serve as the seat of the colonial government in the New Netherlands. It later became a settlement outside of Fort Amsterdam

In 1624, it became a provincial extension of the Dutch Republic and was designated as the capital of the province in 1625, and on September 8, 1664 New Amsterdam was renamed as New York in honor of the Duke of York (later James II of England), in whose name the English had captured it

By 1655, the population of New Netherland had grown to 2,000 people, with 1,500 living in New Amsterdam. By 1664, the population had exploded to almost 9,000 people in New Netherland, 2,500 of whom lived in New Amsterdam, 1,000 lived near Fort Orange, and the remainder in other towns and villages

In 1664 the English took over New Amsterdam and renamed it New York after the Duke of York (later James II & VII). After the Second Anglo-Dutch War of 1665–1667, England and the United Provinces of the Netherlands agreed to the status quo in the Treaty of Breda. The English kept the island of Manhattan, the Dutch giving up their claim to the town and the rest of the colony, while the English formally abandoned Surinam in South America, and the island of Run in the East Indies to the Dutch, confirming their control of the valuable Spice Islands

Today much of what was once New Amsterdam is in New York City

Ellis Island in New York Harbor

Ellis Island was the busiest immigrant inspection station from 1892 to 1954, processing ~12 million people who were bound for the US or Canada; many were from Southern and Eastern Europe including Russians, Italians, Slavs, Jews, Greeks, Poles, Serbs, and Turks

The island is federally owned today and is in New York Harbor within the 2 states of New York and New Jersey, and is a part of the U.S. Statue of Liberty National Monument

The north side of the island hosts a museum of immigration (accessible only by ferry) and the south side of the island, including the Ellis Island Immigrant Hospital, is abandoned but accessible to the public through guided tours

Queens

Queens was established in 1683 as one of the original 12 counties of New York. The settlement was presumably named for the English queen Catherine of Braganza (1638-1705), becoming a borough during the consolidation of New York City in 1898, and from 1683 until 1899, the County of Queens included what is now Nassau County

Queens is today the easternmost of the five boroughs of New York City (The Bronx, Brooklyn, Manhattan, Queens and Staten Island), coterminous with Queens County, and is the most ethnically diverse urban area in the world. If it were to be an independent city, Queens would be the nation's fourth most populous, after Los Angeles, Chicago, and Brooklyn. It is the second largest in New York's population (after Brooklyn), with an estimated 2,358,582 residents in 2017, approximately 48 percent of them foreign-born. It is the largest borough geographically, adjacent to Brooklyn at the southwestern end of Long Island. To its east is Nassau County. Queens also shares water borders with the boroughs of Manhattan and The Bronx

Queens County also is the second most populous county in the U.S. state of New York, behind Brooklyn, which is coterminous with Kings County. Queens is the fourth most densely populated county among New York City's boroughs, as well as in the United States

Northampton, County of Hampshire, The Colony of Massachusetts Bay, British Colonial America (North America) (42° 19' 30.00" N, 72° 38' 30.01" W)

Northampton, Colonial County of Hampshire, The Colony of Massachusetts Bay, British Colonial America is a town that was known as "Norwottuck", or "Nonotuck", meaning "the midst of the river", named by its original Pocumtuc inhabitants. According to various accounts, Northampton was given its present name by John A. King (1629–1703), one of its original English settlers, or possibly in King's honor, since it is supposed that he came to Massachusetts from Northampton, England, his birthplace

The Pocumtuc confederacy occupied the Connecticut River Valley from what is now southern Vermont and New Hampshire into northern Connecticut. The Pocumtuc tribes were Algonquian and traditionally allied with the Mahican confederacy to the west. By 1606 an ongoing struggle between the Mahican and Iroquois confederacies led to direct attacks on the Pocumtuc by the Iroquoian Mohawk nation. The Mahican confederacy had been defeated by 1628, limiting Pocumtuc access to trade routes to the west. The area suffered a major smallpox epidemic in the 1630s following the arrival of Dutch traders in the Hudson Valley and English settlers in the Massachusetts Bay Colony during the previous two decades. It was in this context that the land making up the bulk of modern Northampton was sold to settlers from Springfield in 1653

On May 18, 1653, a petition for township was approved by the general court of Springfield. While some settlers visited the land in the fall of 1653, they waited till early spring 1654 to arrive and establish a permanent settlement. The situation in the region further deteriorated when the Mohawk people escalated hostilities against the Pocumtuc confederacy and other Algonquian tribes after 1655, forcing many of the plague-devastated Algonquian groups into defensive mergers. This coincided with a souring of relations between the Wampanoag and the Massachusetts Bay colonists, eventually leading to the expanded Algonquian alliance, which took part in King Philip's War

      The historic manor of Raleigh, near Barnstaple and in the parish of Pilton, North Devon, was the first recorded home in the 14th century of the influential Chichester family of Devon

      It was recorded in the Doomsday Book of 1086 together with three other manors which lay within the later created parish of Pilton

      Pilton as a borough had existed long before the Norman Conquest and was one of the most important defensive towns in Devon under the Anglo-Saxons

Powerstock, County of Dorset, England (United Kingdom), Europe (50° 45' 39.43" N, 2° 41' 41.33" W)
Powerstock is a village and a civil parish in south-west Dorset, England, and is situated in a steep valley on the edge of the Dorset Downs, 5 miles (8.0 km) north-east of the market town of Bridport

The village contains many cottages and inns; the small Mangerton River runs through the valley

The civil parish includes the village of West Milton to the west and the summit and northern slopes of Eggardon Hill to the south-east

In 2013 the parish had an estimated population of 290; in the 2011 census; figures are published for the Powerstock parish combined with the small parish of North Poorton to the north for a population in this area of 358

The Powerstock name has frequently been misstated (in tree research) as Bridport and as Poorstock (both North and South) and as the inverse of each: Don's tree has attempted to correct such irritations

The origins of the name have not been fully determined; the second part derives from the Old English word "stoc", meaning an outlying farmstead, but the first part-similar to the nearby settlement of Poorton-is unresolved. The Domesday Book of 1086 records the area as "Povrestoch"

According to source (1), the name was 'Poorstock' until the Bridport Railway was built through the village in 1857, when the change to Powerstock was made to avoid connotations of 'poor (rolling) stock'. However, another source (2) states that the name existed in its current form as early as 1787. The Powerstock railway station and the entire Bridport branch line were closed on 5 May 1975

Londinium

Londinium was a Roman settlement established around AD 43; see ID 14794

A bridge over the River Thames turned the city into a road nexus and major port, serving as a major commercial centre in Roman Britain until its abandonment during the 5th century

It became London in the Middle-Ages (part of Anglo-Saxon Britain) of England

PreRoman Scotland (Britannia), Europe (48° 41' 27.46" N, 9° 8' 26.25" E)

Scotland was pre-Roman until ~43 AD, although never occupied by the Roman Empire

Pre-Roman Scotland existed until 43 where recorded history of Scotland began. The arrival of the Roman Empire was when the province of Britannia reached as far north as the Antonine Wall. North of this was Caledonia, inhabited by the Picti, whose uprisings forced Rome's legions back to what was known as Hadrian's Wall. As Rome finally withdrew from Britain, Gaelic raiders called the Scoti began colonizing Western Scotland and Wales

Prior to Roman times, prehistoric Scotland had entered the Neolithic Era about 4000 BC, the Bronze Age about 2000 BC, and the Iron Age around 700 BC

PreRoman Wales (Britannia), Europe (48° 41' 27.46" N, 9° 8' 26.25" E)

The area of Wales existed for thousands of year before the occupation by Rome in 43. Not all of that time had seen continuous occupation, as icesheets moved across the north of Europe, but the hunter-gatherers of the Stone Age and the farmers of the Bronze and Iron Ages left a record for modern archaeologists to analyse

For many decades, historians assumed that waves of population movement across Europe brought advances to this far-flung north-western corner of Europe but modern DNA studies have shown that technological and physical developments were rather slower

Around 225,000 BC, homo sapiens hadn't yet infiltrated Europe, so the human tooth found in the River Elwy valley in North Wales from that time was from an early proto-human, maybe an early Neanderthal. Other, much later, Neanderthal remains have been found at Coygan Cave in Carmarthenshire. These date from about 50,000 BC. The famous 'Red Lady of Paviland' dates from about 26,500 BC and is believed to be the oldest ceremonial burial yet discovered in Europe, but just as a society with burial customs and personal decoration was getting going in Wales, a 6,000-year-long ice age took hold. Archaeologists now know that humans had recolonised Wales in 10,000 BC with a burial in Kendrick's Cave on the Great Orme near Llandudno. Again, this site has evidence of cultural complexity with the discovery of a geometrically-engraved horse's mandible

The Mesolithic period of the Stone Age started in Wales at around 7,000 BC; Pembrokeshire holds some of the greatest concentrations of Mesolithic material in the UK, but sites can be found across Wales; there are examples of art and decoration, plus wooden structures

The Neolithic period from 4000 BC is conventionally the period of organized farming that superseded the hunter-gatherer society. It also marked significant population growth, and a recognizable burial culture. It the first archaeological era to be visible on the surface of the Welsh landscape: chambered tombs such as Bryn Celli Ddu and Barclodiad y Gawres in Anglesey erupt out of the grass. A more subtle effect of the Neolithic period is visible too. Farming necessitated extensive wood clearing, which affected the very look of Wales until the present day. The Neolithic period was an era still very much dependent on stone tools, but the technology was almost perfected. High-standard pottery was also present in Wales at this time. But the advent of metal-working made stone technology redundant

From about 2,100 BC the bronze age saw copper seams in the Great Orme mined extensively. Amazing amounts of the metal were extracted from the hill, and made into bronze tools that found their way as far as northern Germany, pointing to the extensive trade links of Wales with the rest of Europe

From about 1,250 BC a wetter climate led to much of the uplands of Wales becoming covered by unusable peat and population dispersal. Pressures may well have led to a move towards military defence of good land and the building of hillforts from about 800 BC

Llyn Fawr in the Cynon Valley is the site of the discovery of the first iron implements found in Wales, from about 650 BC. Hill forts became more common with Castell Odo on the Lleyn Peninsular being the earliest

Province of Leinster, Ireland, Europe
One of the four Provinces of Ireland

Since the early 17th-century there have been four provinces:
Leinster,
Connacht,
Munster, and Ulster

The Irish word for this territorial division, cúige, meaning "fifth part", indicates that there were once five; in the medieval period there were more

The number of provinces and their delimitation fluctuated until 1610 when they were permanently set by the English administration of James I

The provinces of Ireland no longer serve administrative or political purposes, but function as historical and cultural entities

Rastrick, West Riding of Yorkshire, England (Kingdom of Great Britain), Europe (53° 41' 6.24" N, 1° 48' 11.31" W)
Rastrick is a village in the county of West Yorkshire, England, near Halifax

The population [of the Calderdale Civil Ward] at the 2011 census was 11,351

It is perhaps best known for its association, along with its neighbour Brighouse, with the Brighouse and Rastrick Brass Band. Along with Brighouse, it is part of Calderdale, but shares a Huddersfield postcode and phone number

Historically part of the West Riding of Yorkshire, the village is on an incline facing north-east, the Parish Church, is vertically in the middle. The area around the Parish Church is known as "Top o' t'Town" and the area around the Junction public house is known as "Bottom o' t'Town", this reflects the days when Rastrick had its own governance in the form of a Town Board whose Offices and lock-up were situated halfway between the two, on Ogden Lane

Remains of a fort have been found at Castle Hill, just below Top o' Town.

Region of Celtic-Ireland, Europe (48° 41' 27.46" N, 9° 8' 26.25" E)
Celtic Ireland has evidence of human presence about 12,500 years ago

The receding of the ice around 9700 BC (after the Younger Dryas cold phase of the Quaternary) heralds the beginning of Prehistoric Ireland, which includes the archaeological periods of the Mesolithic, the Neolithic from about 4000 BC, the Copper and Bronze Age from about 2300 BC and Iron Age beginning about 600 BC. Ireland's bronze age begins with the emergence of "protohistoric" Gaelic Ireland in the 2nd Millennium BC and ends with arrival of Celtic la Tène culture by central Europe

By the late 4th century AD Christianity had begun to gradually subsume or replace the earlier Celtic polytheism. By the end of the 6th century it had introduced writing along with a predominantly monastic Celtic Christian church, profoundly altering Irish society

      House of Hanover
      The House of Hanover ("Haus Hannover" in German) is a German royal house that ruled Hanover, Great Britain, and Ireland at various times during the 17th to 20th centuries. It's members are known as Hanoverians

      The house originated in 1635 as a cadet branch of the House of Brunswick-Lüneburg, growing in prestige until Hanover became an Electorate in 1692

      George I became the first Hanoverian monarch of Great Britain and Ireland in 1714

      At Victoria's death in 1901, the throne of the United Kingdom passed to her eldest son Edward VII, a member of the House of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha

      The last reigning members of the house lost the Duchy of Brunswick in 1918 when Germany became a republic, yet the House still exists

Middlesex (Middx) is an ancient county in southeast England, preceded by the Kingdom of Essex, established in the Anglo-Saxon system from the territory of the Middle Saxons. It was encompassed in 1965 within the ceremonial county of Greater London, with small sections in other neighboring ceremonial counties

The historic county included land from north of the River Thames, 17 miles west to 3 miles east of the City of London, with the rivers Colne and Lea; a ridge of hills were the other boundaries. The largely low-lying county, dominated by clay in its north and alluvium on gravel in its south, was the second smallest county by area in England in 1831

Tudor London existed from the end of the Medieval period in 1486 until the death of Queen Elizabeth I ("Gloriana") in 1603, which also ended the "Golden Age" which had represented the apogee of the English Renaissance and saw the flowering of poetry, etc…

Elizabeth's final two decades also saw many mounting problems that were left for the Stuart's to solve after her death. The 1585 to 1603 period is recognised by scholars as distinctly more troubled than the first half of her long reign. Costly wars against Spain and the Irish, involvement in the Netherlands, socio-economic distress, and an authoritarian turn by the regime all cast a pall over her final years, underpinning a weariness with the queen's rule and open criticism of her government and its failures

She remained a strong leader, but almost all of her earlier advisers had died or retired:

> Robert Cecil (1563–1612) took over the role of leading advisor long held by his father Lord Burghley

> Robert Devereux, 2nd Earl of Essex (1567–1601) was her most prominent general, a role previously held by his stepfather

> Robert Dudley, who was the love of Elizabeth's life > and the adventurer/historian Sir Walter Raleigh (1552–1618) who was a new face on the scene

Three of the men formed a triangle of interlocking and opposing forces that was hard to break into. The first vacancy came in 1601, when Devereux was executed for attempting to take the Queen prisoner and seize power

After Elizabeth died the new king kept Cecil as his chief advisor, and beheaded Raleigh

Region of Greater London, England (United Kingdom), Europe
The place that Don named "Region of Greater London" today holds the capital of the United Kingdom and is its largest city; it is used in this tree to consolidate it's many towns, villages and burroughs

Standing at the head of a 50-mile estuary leading to the North Sea, London is across both sides of the River Thames in the south-east of England; it was a major settlement more than two millennia in the past-Londinium was founded by the Romans

The City of London is London's ancient core (an area of 1.12 square miles, colloquially known as the Square Mile) and it retains boundaries that closely follow its medieval limits; the City of Westminster (part of Inner London) also holds city status

The present metropolitan county of Greater London constitutes nearly all of the historic county of Middlesex (which comprises the bulk of London north of the River Thames), parts of the historic counties of Kent, Essex, and Hertfordshire, and a large part of the historic county of Surrey

The administrative structure of Greater London includes the City of London and 32 boroughs:

Inner London boroughs (13) are: Camden, Hackney, Hammersmith and Fulham, Haringey, Islington, Kensington and Chelsea, Lambeth, Lewisham, Newham, Tower Hamlets (loaded in Don's tree data as the Borough of Tower Hamlets), Wandsworth, and the City of Westminster

Outer London boroughs (19) are: Barking and Dagenham, Barnet, Bexley, Brent, Bromley, Croydon, Ealing, Enfield, Greenwich, Harrow, Havering, Hillingdon, Hounslow, Kingston upon Thames, Merton, Redbridge, Richmond upon Thames, Southwark, Sutton, and Waltham Forest

Greater London was formally created by the London Government Act of 1963 which came into force on 1 April 1965, replacing the administrative counties of Middlesex and London, including the City of London, where the London County Council had limited powers, and absorbing parts of Essex, Hertfordshire, Kent and Surrey. It is governed today by the Mayor of London & the London Assembly; the villages of Clapham, Putney and Streatham form the three adjacent corners of an area of South London

Westminster Abbey
It is hard to imagine Westminster at the time of the Conquest in 1066, when it occupied an island site amid the marshes that flanked the Thames… Since William the Conqueror received the English crown here on Christmas Day 1066, coronations have always been conducted in Westminster Abbey. An earlier Saxon monastery was completely destroyed by the Danes during the eighth century

Westminster's history as a Benedictine house dates to its foundation by St. Dunstan in 959, although it was Edward the Confessor who established its status as the royal church of England following its consecration on 28 December 1065, just one week before his death

Henry III was largely responsible for building the magnificent abbey church that stands today, work on which began in 1245, favoring the French Gothic style, which placed greater emphasis on height than the particular English interpretation that had evolved by then. Flying buttresses were used as a means of supporting the height of French cathedrals, a technique deemed visually ugly by English builders, who preferred to restrict the height and use internal methods of support. Work on the new church advanced rapidly, and it was reopened in 1269. Although much of the nave was not completed until well over a century later, fortunately the architect was content to follow the style of his predecessor, thereby maintaining the visual continuity

Westminster Abbey is not merely a church of unsurpassed beauty but is also the last resting place of English monarchs - from Henry III in 1272 to George III in 1820. Without doubt, the abbey's sublime architectural achievement is the Henry VII chapel, originally founded by the monarch early in the sixteenth century with the intention of creating a shrine to Henry VI. This plan never came to fruition, and so the masterpiece of royal mason Robert Vertue was adopted by its instigator for himself and his queen, Elizabeth

The fan-vaulted ceiling is elaborately decorated with the most complex tracery imaginable, the finest example of that art form in England. Almost every square inch of the chapel seems to be adorned with some form of intricate decoration and, although the overall effect can be almost overwhelming, it remains a quite breathtaking piece of work

The royal tomb in the chapel is the work of a Florentine contemporary of Michelangelo, sculptor Pietro Torrigiano, who was commissioned to create the most moving, gilt-bronzed effigies of Henry and Elizabeth

However, kings and queens are not the only ones celebrated in death; the abbey houses the Grave to the Unknown Soldier, a nation's tribute to those slain during the First World War. Famous names from the art, literature and science mingle with numerous outrageously ostentatious memorials erected to members of the nobility.

Region of Northern Europe

The Archaeology of Northern Europe roughly corresponds to the territories of modern Sweden, Norway, Denmark, northern Germany, Poland and the Netherlands

The region entered the Mesolithic period around the 7th millennium BCE and the transition to the Neolithic period is characterized by the Funnelbeaker culture in the 4th millennium BC

The Chalcolithic period is marked by the arrival of the Corded Ware culture, possibly the first influence in the region of Indo-European expansion

The Nordic Bronze Age began roughly one millennium later, around 1500 BC; the end of the Bronze Age is characterized by cultural contact with the Central European La Tène culture (Celts), contributing to the development of the Iron Age by the 4th century BC, presumably the locus of Common Germanic culture

Northern Europe enters the protohistorical period in the early centuries CE, with the adoption of writing and ethnographic accounts by Roman authors

The Australian Colonies

Britain's first contact with Australia came with Captain Cook's voyage in the ship Endeavour, landing in 1770 where he claimed it as a British territory

The process of colonization began in 1788. A fleet of 11 ships, containing 736 convicts, some British troops and a governor set up the first colony of New South Wales. This presented the ideal opportunity for Britain to get rid of its convicts (after the 13 colonies in America became the US in 1776) and in the next 60 years about 160,000 were transported to Australia

Thousands of other British settlers subsequently migrated to Australia as they were attracted by the easily available land (which led to conflicts with the Aborigines) and they could make a living raising sheep or by catching seals and whales. In 1826 the settlers began colonizing Western Australia; the colony of South Australia was set up in 1834. A whole new wave of migration was sparked off in the 1850s by the discovery of gold and the white population of Australia rose by around half a million in 10 years (while the Aboriginal population decreased)

In 1889, amid calls from London for the establishment of an intercolonial Australian army, and with the various colonies independently constructing railway lines, New South Wales Premier Henry Parkes addressed a rural audience in his "Tenterfield Oration", stating that the time had come to form a national executive government: "Australia [now has] a population of three and a half millions, and the American people numbered only between three and four millions when they formed the great commonwealth of the United States. The numbers were about the same, and surely what the Americans had done by war, the Australians could bring about in peace, without breaking the ties that held them to the mother country."

Region of the British Colonial Americas (North America)
Initially formed in 1607, British Colonial America was established as the 1st permanent colony at Jamestown on the Chesapeake Bay by the London Company; a year earlier, King James I of England had granted charters to the Plymouth Company & the London Company for the purpose of establishing permanent settlements in North America

It grew as a regional area as more people arrived, becoming the United States of Americal in 1776

Region of the British Isles, Europe (51° 28' 36.67" N, 0° 0' 1.80" W)
Don's birth-place is in Bournemouth, a southern town of England in the British Isles

The British Isles consists of many islands of approx 315,000 sq.km in the North Atlantic Ocean off of the north-western coast of continental Europe. The area was once joined to the mainland of Europe during the last glacial period of Quaternary glaciation (when the seas were lower with the most recent Ice Age) as a single mass of land extending northwest from the northern coastlines of France, Belgium and the Netherlands

With the end of the last Ice Age the British Isles evolved into the islands of Britain, Ireland, the Isle of Man, the Hebrides of Scotland and more than 6,000 smaller isles; the islands of Alderney, Jersey, Guernsey, Sark, and their neighboring smaller islands are a part of the British Isles, even though they do not form part of the archipelago-they are islands off of the coast of France

Ice continued to cover almost all of Scotland, most of Ireland and Wales and the hills of northern England as the islands formed; from ~14,000 BC to 10,000 BC, sea levels rose as the ice melted, separating Ireland from Britain and also creating the Isle of Man-in about 7,000 BC, Britain became separated from the mainland of Europe and was (presumed) to have been repopulated as the Ice Age ended; when Britain was still part of a peninsula of the European continent. Ireland was not settled by people until after 8,000 BC

Today's climate of the islands is defined as "temperate marine," with mild winters and warm summers; however, as of this update in July, 2022 the islands are heating up along with the enire planet

The North Atlantic drift does bring significant amounts of moisture to the islands, raising temperatures by ~11°C (20°F) above the global average for other locations around the globe at this latitude, 51° 28' 0.12" N-this led to a landscape long dominated by a temperate rainforest, although human activity has since cleared the vast majority of forest cover

Britain remained physically separated from Europe until the Euro Tunnel under the Straits of Dover in the English Channel was opened on December 1st, 1990, linking Folkestone, Kent with Coquelles, Pas-de-Calais (near Calais) via rail. Today's UK has been a part of the EU since 1973 and remains so, although there are active debates about its departure (March, 2019)

Culturally, the United Kingdom of England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland has evolved over many years

At the start of the Roman Empire in the 1st millennium AD, the tribes of Hiberni (Ireland), Pictish (northern Britain) and Briton (southern Britain), all speaking Celtic dialects, were inhabiting the islands. The Romans expanded their civilisation to control much of Brittonic-occupied Britain in AD 43, but were impeded in advancing any further and built Hadrian's Wall to mark the northern frontier of their empire in 122 AD

The first Anglo-Saxons arrived as Roman power started to wane in the 5th century, eventually dominating the bulk of what is now England; while it still remains unclear today, Don's ancestral line likely comes from here

Initially, the Anglo-Saxon arrival seems to have been at the invitation of the Britons as mercenaries to repulse incursions by the Hiberni and Picts but over time, Anglo-Saxon demands on the British became so great that they came to culturally dominate the bulk of southern Britain, though recent genetic evidence suggests Britons still formed the bulk of the population. This dominance created what is now England, leaving culturally British enclaves only in the north of what is now England, in Cornwall and what is now known as Wales

Ireland had been unaffected by the Romans except, significantly, for being Christianized-traditionally by the Romano-Briton, Saint Patrick. As Europe, including Britain, descended into turmoil following the collapse of Roman civilisation, an era known as the Dark Ages, Ireland entered a golden age and responded with missions (first to Britain and then to the continent), the founding of monasteries and universities. These were later joined by Anglo-Saxon missions of a similar nature

Viking invasions began in the 9th century, followed by more permanent settlements, particularly along the east coast of Ireland, the west coast of modern-day Scotland and the Isle of Man. Though the Vikings were eventually neutralized in Ireland, their influence remained in the cities of Dublin, Cork, Limerick, Waterford and Wexford. England, however, was slowly conquered around the end of the first millennium, eventually becoming a feudal possession of Denmark

The relations between the descendants of Vikings in England and counterparts in Normandy, in northern France, lay at the heart of a series of events that led to the Norman conquest of England in 1066 (by Don's 35th Great Grandfather, William Beauclerc)-the remnants of the Duchy of Normandy, which conquered England, remain associated to the English Crown as the Channel Islands to this day

A century later, the marriage of the future King of England Henry II to Eleanor of Aquitaine created the Angevin Empire, partially under the French Crown. At the invitation of Diarmait Mac Murchada, a provincial king, and under the authority of Pope Adrian IV (the only Englishman to be elected pope), the Angevins invaded Ireland in 1169. Though initially intended to be kept as an independent kingdom, the failure of the Irish High King to ensure the terms of the Treaty of Windsor led Henry II, as King of England, to rule as effective monarch under the title of Lord of Ireland. This title was granted to his younger son, but when Henry's heir unexpectedly died, the title of King of England and Lord of Ireland became entwined in one person

The Magna Carta charter for Britain was written by King John and released June 15th, 1215; six of the Barons are part of the tree (see the media file "The Magna Carta Charter of 1215.pdf" for more details)

By the Late Middle Ages, Britain was separated into the Kingdoms of England and of Scotland, while control in Ireland fluxed between Gaelic kingdoms, Hiberno-Norman lords and the English-dominated Lordship of Ireland. A similar situation existed in the Principality of Wales, which was slowly being annexed into the Kingdom of England by a series of laws

During the course of the 15th century, the Crown of England would assert a claim to the Crown of France, thereby also releasing the King of England from being vassal of the King of France. In 1534, King Henry VIII, at first having been a strong defender of Roman Catholicism in the face of the Reformation, separated from the Roman Church after failing to secure a divorce from the Pope. His response was to place the King of England as "the only Supreme Head in Earth of the Church of England", thereby removing the authority of the Pope from the affairs of the English Church. Ireland, which had been held by the King of England as Lord of Ireland, but which strictly speaking had been a feudal possession of the Pope since the Norman invasion was declared a separate kingdom in personal union with England

Scotland meanwhile had remained an independent Kingdom. In 1603, that changed when the King of Scotland inherited the Crown of England, and consequently the Crown of Ireland also. The subsequent 17th century was one of political upheaval, religious division and war. English colonialism in Ireland of the 16th century was extended by large-scale Scottish and English colonies in Ulster. Religious division heightened and the king in England came into conflict with parliament over his tolerance towards Catholicism. The resulting English Civil War (or "The War of the Three Kingdoms") led to a revolutionary republic in England

Ireland, largely Catholic, was mainly loyal to the king. Following defeat to the parliaments army, large scale land distributions from loyalist Irish nobility to English commoners in the service of the parliamentary army created a new Ascendancy class which obliterated the remnants of Old English (Hiberno-Norman) and Gaelic Irish nobility in Ireland. The new ruling class was Protestant and English, whilst the populace was largely Catholic and Irish. This theme would influence Irish politics for centuries to come. When the monarchy was restored in England, the king found it politically impossible to restore the lands of former land-owners in Ireland. The "Glorious Revolution" of 1688 repeated similar themes: a Catholic king pushing for religious tolerance in opposition to a Protestant parliament in England. The king's army was defeated at the Battle of the Boyne and at the militarily crucial Battle of Aughrim in Ireland. Resistance held out, eventually forcing the guarantee of religious tolerance in the Treaty of Limerick. However, the terms were never honoured and a new monarchy was installed

The Kingdoms of England and Scotland were unified in 1707 creating the Kingdom of Great Britain. Following an attempted republican revolution in Ireland in 1798, the Kingdoms of Ireland and Great Britain were unified in 1801, creating the United Kingdom. The Isle of Man and the Channel Islands remained outside of the United Kingdom but with their ultimate good governance being the responsibility of the British Crown (effectively the British government)

Although the colonies of North America that would become the United States of America were lost by the start of the 19th century, the British Empire expanded rapidly elsewhere. A century later it would cover one third of the globe. Poverty in the United Kingdom remained desperate, however, and industrialization in England led to terrible condition for the working classes. Mass migrations following the Irish Famine and Highland Clearances resulted in the distribution of the islands' population and culture throughout the world and a rapid de-population of Ireland in the second half of the 19th century. Most of Ireland seceded from the United Kingdom after the Irish War of Independence and the subsequent Anglo-Irish Treaty (1919–1922), with the six counties that formed Northern Ireland remaining as an autonomous region of the UK

The Isle of Wight was owned by a Norman family until 1293, and was earlier a kingdom in its own right

Historically a part of Hampshire, the island became a separate administrative county in 1890. It continued to share the Lord Lieutenant of Hampshire until 1974, when it was made its own ceremonial county. In common with the Crown dependencies, the British Crown was then represented on the island by the Governor of the Isle of Wight until 1995

It is the largest and second-most populous island in England and is in the English Channel, between 2 and 5 miles off the coast of Hampshire, separated by the Solent. The island has resorts that have been holiday destinations since Victorian times, and is known for its mild climate, coastal scenery, and verdant landscape of fields, downland and chines

Rural for most of its history, its Victorian fashionability and the growing affordability of holidays led to significant urban development during the late 19th and early 20th centuries

The island played an important part in the defence of the ports of Southampton and Portsmouth, and been near the front-line of conflicts through the ages, including the Spanish Armada and the Battle of Britain

Apart from a shared police force, and the island's Anglican churches belonging to the Diocese of Portsmouth (originally Winchester), there is now no administrative link with Hampshire; although a combined local authority with Portsmouth and Southampton was considered, this is now unlikely to proceed

Rehoboth is an historic town in Bristol County, Massachusetts

Established by Walter Palmer and William Sabin in 1643, it was incorporated in 1645, one of the earliest Massachusetts towns to incorporate. The town is named for the Hebrew word for "enlargement," (Broad Places) signifying the space settlers enjoyed (God has given us room) and is one of the oldest towns in Massachusetts

Early Rehoboth, known as "Old Rehoboth," included all of what is now Seekonk, Massachusetts, and East Providence, Rhode Island, as well as parts of the nearby communities of Attleboro, North Attleborough, Swansea, and Somerset in Massachusetts, and Barrington, Bristol, Warren, Pawtucket, Cumberland, and Woonsocket in Rhode Island. The town was (and still is) the site of a crossroads which helped to serve Taunton, Providence, Fall River and points to the north

One of the founding fathers of Rehoboth was Samuel Newman, a clergyman from Weymouth, Massachusetts who moved to the Seconet area near to Little Compton in the Plymouth Colony. Samuel Newman and his followers migrated north and established a huge town common in what is now Rumford, Rhode Island. They gave the roundabout a distinctive name: "The Ring of the Green"

The Newman Congregational Church (founded 1643, current building dates to 1810) still stands at the intersections of Pawtucket Ave, Newman Ave and Ferris Ave

Somewhat of a celebrity, Newman's famous bible concordance (the third ever printed in English) had just been published in London. He spent the next few years revising the concordance with a second edition published in 1650 that includes on the title page, "By Samuel Newman, now teacher of the Church at Rehoboth in New England." According to legend, he worked on the revisions by burning pine knots instead of candles. The concordance, later called the Cambridge Concordance, was reprinted as late as 1889, almost 250 years after it was first published by the founder of Rehoboth

Governor Bradford of the Plymouth Colony formally surrendered his patent rights to the "Body of Freemen" of the Plymouth Colony to the Massachusetts Bay Colony. He however retained 3 previously reserved lands: "...from Sowamsett River to Pawtucket River, with Cawsumsett Neck…extending into the land eight miles through the whole breadth thereof." This tract comprised the present Swansea, Rehoboth, Seekonk and Attleboro, MA, and East Providence, Cumberland and Pawtucket, RI

Roman Scotland, Europe (48° 41' 27.46" N, 9° 8' 26.25" E)
Between 43 AD and ~128, the Roman empire repeatedly attempted to extend their northern border into Scotland

After failing to invade a decision was made in 122 to build a "defensive fortification in the Roman province of Britannia" to keep the Scottish people out… Named "Hadrian's Wall" after the Roman Emperor Hadrian (also called the "Roman Wall", "Picts' Wall" or (Latin) "Vallum Hadriani"), it still runs westerly across northern Britannia from the east of Britain on the banks of the River Tyne (near the North Sea) to the Solway Firth on the Irish Sea… The wall is south of the Scottish border, ranging from less than a mile to 68 miles

> Zuid-Holland
> Zuid-Holland is the southern part of Holland, which today is a region (and a former province) on the western coast of the Netherlands; "Holland" is also frequently used informally to refer to the whole of the country of the Netherlands. While this usage is commonly accepted in other countries, and sometimes employed by the Dutch themselves, some in the Netherlands, particularly those from regions outside Holland, may find it undesirable or misrepresentative to use the term for the whole country

> From the 10th to the 16th century, Holland proper was a unified political region within the Holy Roman Empire as a county ruled by the counts of Holland. By the 17th century, the province of Holland had risen to become a maritime and economic power, dominating the other provinces of the newly independent Dutch Republic

> The area of the former County of Holland roughly coincides with the two current Dutch provinces of North Holland and South Holland into which it was divided, and which together include the Netherlands' three largest cities: the de jure capital city of Amsterdam; Rotterdam, home of Europe's largest port; and the seat of government of The Hague. Holland has a population of 6,583,534 as of November 2019,[4] and a density of 1,203/km2 (3,120/sq mi)

Saint David's, Pembrokeshire, Wales (Medieval), Europe
St David's is a city and a community (named St Davids on the Cathedral Close) with a cathedral in Pembrokeshire, Wales, lying on the River Alun; it is the resting place of Saint David, Wales's patron saint, and named after him

St Davids is the United Kingdom's smallest city in population (just over 1,600 in 2011) and urban area (the smallest city by local authority boundary area being the City of London)

St Davids was given city status in the 12th century. This does not derive automatically from criteria, but in England and Wales it was traditionally given to cathedral towns under practices laid down in the early 1540s, when Henry VIII founded dioceses. City status was withdrawn in 1886, but restored in 1994 at the request of Queen Elizabeth II

St. Just is an actual place in Cornwall, a town and civil parish in the Penwith district; the one used here is "St. Just-in-Penwith" vs. "St. Just-in-Roseland"

The identity of the name of "Saint Just: is still not well-known; Cornwall's long resistance to the edicts of Canterbury and Rome makes it unlikely that the saint was Archbishop Justus of Canterbury, as some sources have claimed-the 6th-century Saint Iestyn (said to be the son of a ruler of Dumnonia) is another possibility and in 1478 William of Worcester found that the church contained the bones of Justus of Trieste

Among the prehistoric antiquities nearby is Ballowall Barrow, an ancient chambered tomb

St Just is one of the most ancient mining districts in Cornwall, where remains of ancient pre-industrial and more modern mining activity have had a considerable impact on the nearby landscape

Salamaca

Salem Village, County of Essex, The Colony of Massachusetts Bay, British Colonial America (North America)

Salem is located at the mouth of the Naumkeag river at the site of an ancient American Indian village and trading center, first settled by Europeans in 1626, when a company of fishermen arrived from Cape Ann

Led by Roger Conant, his leadership provided the stability to survive the first two years, but John Endecott, one of the new arrivals, replaced him by order of the Massachusetts Bay Company. Conant graciously stepped aside and was granted 200 acres of land in compensation

These "New Planters" and "Old Planters" agreed to cooperate, in large part due to the diplomacy of Conant and Endecott, and in recognition of this peaceful transition to the new government, the name of the settlement was changed to Salem, a hellenized form of the word for "peace" in Hebrew, "shalom"

Salem went on to become famous with the witch trials between February 1692 and May 1693. These were a series of hearings and prosecutions of people accused of witchcraft in colonial Massachusetts that resulted in the executions of twenty people, fourteen of them women, and all but one by hanging. Five others (including two infant children) died in prison

The preliminary hearings in 1692 were conducted in several towns: Salem Village (now Danvers), Salem Town, Ipswich, and Andover

In 1658 when the subject of witchcraft first came to his [Reverend Francis Dane] attention, he came down decidedly against the concept. When John Godfrey was charged with injuring the wife of Job Tyler by "Satanic acts", Dane judged against the probability

Around 1680, when Francis Dane was about sixty-five years of age, church members became concerned about his ability to fulfill his role leading the church and requested that a younger minister be sent to them. In January 1682, Rev. Thomas Barnard, a recent graduate of Harvard, arrived. Shortly following Barnard's arrival, Francis Dane's salary was stopped. Dane petitioned the General Court in Boston to have it reinstated. The town complied, but split the salary of 80 pounds a year so that Dane received thirty pounds and Barnard received fifty. Neither man was pleased with the solution

Dane had lived in Andover for forty-four years, and he was seventy-six years old when the Salem Witch Trials began. On October 18, 1692, Francis Dane, Thomas Barnard, and twenty-three others wrote a letter to the governor and to the General Court publicly condemning the witch trials. Dane and his family were in danger as half a dozen family members stood accused, including Francis Dane himself. Another minister, George Burroughs, had been hanged, and thus Dane's status did not guarantee protection. He warned that his people were guilty of blood for accepting unfounded accusations against covenanted members of the church

Two of Francis Dane's daughters, Elizabeth Dane Johnson and Abigail Dane Faulkner, and his daughter-in-law, Deliverance Dane, were all arrested. Abigail Dane Faulkner's two daughters, Abigail Faulkner and Dorothy Faulkner, were also accused of witchcraft

Dane's daughter, Abigail Faulkner Sr., was convicted and condemned in September 1692 but given a temporary stay of execution because she was pregnant. She was later pardoned by the governor and released

Although Dane's extended family had the most accused of any family, none of his immediate family members were executed, except Elizabeth Jackson Howe (executed July 19, 1692), wife of James Howe, Jr. (or How). Martha Carrier, Dane's niece was also executed as a witch August 19, 1692

> Eu is a commune in the Seine-Maritime department in the Normandy region of northern France, located near the coast in the eastern part of the department and near the border with Picardy

> Eu is situated at the junction of the RD 1015, the RD 925, the RD 940 and the RD 1314 roads, in the steep-sided valley of the Bresle River, whose mouth is 4 km (2.5 mi) away to the north-west in Le Tréport. The name of the commune is from the old name of the river; before being called the Bresle, this river was known in the Middle Ages under the name of Ou, which then became Eu

Settlement of Jamestown, Colony of Virginia, British Colonial America (North America)
The Jamestown settlement in the Colony of Virginia was the first permanent English settlement in the Americas and was located on the northeast bank of the James River, about 2.5 mi (4 km) southwest of the center of modern Williamsburg

Established by the Virginia Company of London as "James Fort" on May 4, 1607, if was considered permanent after a brief abandonment in 1610. This followed several failed attempts, including the Lost Colony of Roanoke, established in 1585 on Roanoke Island, later part of North Carolina. Jamestown served as the colonial capital from 1616 until 1699

Despite the dispatch of more settlers and supplies, more than 80 percent of the colonists died in 1609–10, mostly from starvation and disease. In mid-1610, the survivors abandoned Jamestown, though they returned after meeting a resupply convoy in the James River

In August 1619, the first recorded slaves from Africa to British North America arrived in what is now Old Point Comfort near the Jamestown colony, on a British privateer ship flying a Dutch flag. The approximately 20 Africans from present-day Angola had been removed by the British crew from the Portuguese slave ship São João Bautista. They most likely worked in the tobacco fields as slaves under a system of race-based indentured servitude. One of their number included Ms. Angela, who was purchased by William Peirce. The modern conception of slavery in the British colonies was formalized in 1640 (the John Punch hearing) and was fully entrenched in the Colony of Virginia by 1660

The London Company's second settlement in Bermuda claims to be the site of the oldest town in the English New World, as St. George's, Bermuda, was officially established in 1612 as New London, whereas James Fort in Virginia was not converted into James Towne until 1619, and further did not survive to the present day

In 1676, Jamestown was deliberately burned to the ground during Bacon's Rebellion, and although it was quickly rebuilt. In 1699, the colonial capital was moved to what is today Williamsburg, Virginia—Jamestown ceased to exist as a settlement, and remains today only as an archaeological site, Jamestown Rediscovery

Today, Jamestown is one of three locations composing the Historic Triangle of Colonial Virginia, along with Williamsburg and Yorktown, with two primary heritage sites. Historic Jamestown is the archaeological site on Jamestown Island and is a cooperative effort by Jamestown National Historic Site (part of Colonial National Historical Park) and Preservation Virginia. The Jamestown Settlement, a living history interpretive site, is operated by the Jamestown Yorktown Foundation, a state agency of the Commonwealth of Virginia

Mayflower officers and crew
According to author Charles Edward Banks, the Mayflower had 14 officers consisting of the master, four mates, four quartermasters, surgeon, carpenter, cooper, cook, boatswain, and gunner, plus about 36 men before the mast for a total of about 50; more recent authors estimate a crew of about 30. The entire crew stayed with the Mayflower in Plymouth through the winter of 1620-21, and about half of them died. The surviving crew returned to London on the Mayflower on April 5, 1621

Known crew members
Captain Christopher Jones
John Clarke - First Mate and Pilot
Robert Coppin - Second Mate and Pilot
Giles Heale - ship's surgeon, identified with the Separatists (but not counted as one of the 102 passengers)
Andrew Williamson - Seaman
John Parker - Seaman
Master Leaver - Seaman

John Alden - A 21 year-old from Harwich, Essex, the ship's cooper; he was given the choice of remaining in the colony or returning to England and decided to remain

He died sometime before the departure of the Mayflower for England on April 5, 1621

He returned to England on the Fortune in December 1621 along with Ely and others. By 1650, he had returned to New England

Animals on board
Two dogs are known to have participated in settling Plymouth. In Mourt's Relation, Edward Winslow writes that a female English Mastiff and a small English Springer-Spaniel came ashore on the first explorations of Provincetown. The ship was probably also carrying small domestic animals such as goats, pigs, and chickens. Larger domestic animals came later, such as cows and sheep

Springfield, Hampden County, The Colony of Massachusetts Bay, British Colonial America (North America) (42° 6' 5.00" N, 72° 35' 25.01" W)
Springfield, Hampden, The Colony of Massachusetts Bay, British Colonial America (far inland from the Cape Cod Bay) was founded in 1636 by English Puritan William Pynchon as "Agawam Plantation" under the administration of the Connecticut Colony

In 1641 it was renamed after Pynchon's hometown of Springfield, Essex, England, following incidents, including trade disputes as well as Captain John Mason's hostilities toward native tribes, which precipitated the settlement's joining the Massachusetts Bay Colony. During its early existence, Springfield flourished both as an agricultural settlement and as a trading post, although its prosperity waned dramatically during (and after) King Philip's War in 1675, when natives laid siege to it and burned it to the ground as part of the ongoing campaign. During that attack, three-quarters of the original settlement was burned to the ground, with many of Springfield's residents survived by taking refuge in John Pynchon's brick house, the "Old Fort", the first such house to be built in the Connecticut River Valley. Out of the siege, Miles Morgan and his sons were lauded as heroes; as one of the few homesteads to survive the attack, alerting troops in Hadley, as well as Toto, often referred to as the "Windsor Indian" who, running 20 miles from Windsor, Connecticut to the settlement, was able to give advance warning of the attack

The original settlement—today's downtown Springfield—was located atop bluffs at the confluence of four rivers, at the nexus of trade routes to Boston, Albany, New York City, and Montréal, and with some of the northeastern United States' most fertile soil. In 1777, Springfield's location at numerous crossroads led George Washington and Henry Knox to establish the United States' National Armory at Springfield, which produced the first American musket in 1794, and later the famous Springfield rifle. From 1777 until its closing during the Vietnam War, the Springfield Armory attracted skilled laborers to Springfield, making it the United States' longtime center for precision manufacturing. The near-capture of the armory during Shays' Rebellion of 1787 led directly to the formation of the U.S. Constitutional Convention

Main Street in Springfield, 1908-during the 19th and 20th centuries, Springfielders produced many innovations, including the first American-English dictionary (1805, Merriam-Webster); the first use of interchangeable parts and the assembly line in manufacturing (1819, Thomas Blanchard); the first American horseless car (1825, Thomas Blanchard); the mass production of vulcanized rubber (1844, Charles Goodyear); the first American gasoline-powered car (1893, Duryea Brothers); the first successful motorcycle company (1901, "Indian"); one of America's first commercial radio stations (1921, WBZ, broadcast from the Hotel Kimball); and most famously, the world's second-most-popular sport, basketball (1891, Dr. James Nazareth). Springfield would play major roles in machine production, initially driven by the arms industry of the Armory, as well as from private companies such as Smith & Wesson, established by Horace Smith and Daniel B. Wesson. Similarly, the industrial economy led Thomas and Charles Watson to establish the Watson Manufacturing Company, which produced the first manufactured sleeping car. The largest rail car works in New England, Watson produced 100 cars a day at its peak; the company was eventually was purchased by Brill in 1907 and closed during the Depression in 1937. Among numerous other industries, during the first half of the 20th century Springfield also produced brass goods, chemicals, clothing and knit goods, paper goods, watches, boilers, engines, manufacturing machinery, silverware, jewelry, skates, carriages, buttons, needles, toys, and printed books and magazines

Springfield underwent a protracted decline during the second half of the 20th century, due largely to the decommissioning of the Springfield Armory in 1969; poor city planning decisions, such as the location of the elevated I-91 along the city's Connecticut River front; and overall decline of industry throughout the northeastern United States. During the 1980s and 1990s, Springfield developed a national reputation for crime, political corruption, and cronyism. During the early 21st century, Springfield saw long-term revitalization projects and several large projects, including the $1 billion New Haven–Hartford–Springfield intercity rail; a $1 billion MGM casino

State of Styria, Austria, Europe

The State of Styria (German: Steiermark) is an Austrian state today & was originally a duchy of the Holy Roman Empire and later a crownland of Austria-Hungary. During those times Styria also included parts of Slovenia. It borders Carinthia, Salzburg, Upper Austria, Lower Austria, Burgenland, and Slovenia

There are 3 regions: Upper Styria lies to the north of the Mur-Muerz valley and Eastern & Western Styria lie to the east (or west) of the river Mur and to the south of the Mur-Muerz valley

Lower Styria referred to the ancient slovenian parts of Styria, however today most Austrians use it to refer to eastern and western Styria at once

Stower-Provost, Dorsetshire, England (Kingdom of Great Britain), Europe (50° 45' 0.00" N, 2° 20' 0.00" W)
Stour Provost is a village and civil parish in the Blackmore Vale area of north Dorset, England, situated on the River Stour between Sturminster Newton and Gillingham; usually spelled "Stower" Provost in old writings

It once constituted a liberty, containing only the parish itself; today the civil parish includes the settlements of Woodville and Stour Row to the east

After the establishment of Stour Provost village near the River Stour, at least four smaller settlements were established in a piecemeal fashion from the 13th century-or perhaps earlier-in the common land or "waste" further east, at Woodville and beyond. These small groups of farms, with their own irregular shaped fields, were separated by unenclosed "waste" probably until the 18th century, when it was enclosed and divided into rectilinear fields

The Colony of Massachusetts Bay (1628-1691) was an English settlement on the east coast of North America around the Massachusetts Bay, the northernmost of several colonies, later reorganized as the "Province of Massachusetts Bay" in the 1691 merge (that location description shares details)

The Netherlands, Europe

The Netherlands (Dutch: "Nederland"), informally known as Holland, is a country in Western Europe along the North Sea coast. In Europe, it consists of 12 provinces that border Germany to the east, Belgium to the south, and the North Sea to the northwest, with maritime borders in the North Sea with those countries and the United Kingdom

Together with the Caribbean Netherlands, consisting of Bonaire, Sint Eustatius, and Saba, it forms a constituent country of the Kingdom of the Netherlands

The country's official language is Dutch, with English and Papiamentu as secondary official languages in the Caribbean Netherlands, and West Frisian as a secondary official language in the province of Friesland. Dutch Low Saxon and Limburgish are recognised regional languages (spoken in the east and southeast respectively), while Sinte Romani and Yiddish are recognised non-territorial languages

The four largest cities in the Netherlands are Amsterdam, Rotterdam, The Hague, and Utrecht. Amsterdam is the country's most populous city and nominal capital, while The Hague holds the seat of the States General, Cabinet and Supreme Court. The Port of Rotterdam is the busiest seaport in Europe, and the busiest in any country outside Asia. Amsterdam Airport Schiphol is the busiest airport in the Netherlands, and the third busiest in Europe

The country is a founding member of the EU, Eurozone, G10, NATO, OECD and WTO, as well as a part of the Schengen Area and the trilateral Benelux Union. It hosts several intergovernmental organizations and international courts, many of which are centered in The Hague, which is consequently dubbed 'the world's legal capital'

Netherlands literally means 'lower countries' in reference to its low elevation and flat topography, with only about 50% of its land exceeding 1 metre (3 ft 3 in) above sea level, and nearly 17% falling below sea level. Most of the areas below sea level, known as polders, are the result of land reclamation that began in the 16th century. Colloquially or informally the Netherlands are occasionally referred to by the pars pro toto Holland

With a population of 17.4 million people, all living within a total area of roughly 41,800 square kilometres (16,100 sq mi)—of which the land area is 33,500 square kilometres (12,900 sq mi)—the Netherlands is the 12th most densely populated country in the world and the 5th most densely populated country in Europe, with a density of 521 per square kilometre (1,350/sq mi). Nevertheless, it is the world's second-largest exporter of food and agricultural products (after the United States), owing to its fertile soil, mild climate, intensive agriculture and inventiveness

The Netherlands has been a parliamentary constitutional monarchy with a unitary structure since 1848. The country has a tradition of pillarization and a long record of social tolerance, having legalized abortion, prostitution and human euthanasia, along with maintaining a liberal drug policy. The Netherlands abolished the death penalty in Civil Law in 1870. It stayed in the Law of war and Military Law. In the Second World War it was reintroduced for the Bijzonder Gerechtshof that dealt with war criminals. It was removed altogether from the Constitution in 1983. The Netherlands allowed women's suffrage in 1919, before becoming the world's first country to legalize same-sex marriage in 2001. Its mixed-market advanced economy had the thirteenth-highest per capita income globally. The Netherlands ranks among the highest in international indexes of press freedom, economic freedom, human development and quality of life, as well as happiness

In 2019, the Netherlands had the eleventh highest economy as measured by GDP per capita.
In 2019, it ranked tenth on the human development index.

The Plymouth Colony (West of the Cape Cod Bay), British Colonial America (North America)

The Colony of Plymouth was located in Plymouth Bay (a western part of the Cape Cod Bay) and it went from the west in Sandwich around and up past Provincetown at the northern top of the "hook"

Cape Cod Bay is a large bay of the Atlantic Ocean to the east of Massachusetts-Massachusetts Bay lies to the north of Cape Cod Bay. In 1524 the great Italian navigator Giovanni da Verrazzano was the first European to discover Cape Cod Bay, his claim proved by a map of 1529 which clearly outlined the bay

Since 1914, Cape Cod has been separated from the mainland by the canal that cuts 7 miles (11 km) across the base of the peninsula

[source https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Cape_Cod_Bay]

In 1620, the arriving Pilgrims from England (the Mayflower Pilgrims) first sheltered in Provincetown Harbor before relocating across the bay to the Plymouth Colony where they signed the Mayflower Compact, the first democratic document signed in the New World; some of the later arrivals shown here are a guess

The Plymouth Colony (sometimes named as "Plimouth") was an English colonial venture in America from 1620 to 1691 at a location that had previously been surveyed and named by Captain John Smith

The settlement served as the capital of the colony and developed as the town of Plymouth, Massachusetts. At its height, Plymouth Colony occupied most of the southeastern portion of Massachusetts
Map: https://upload.wikimedia.org/wikipedia/commons/a/a8/Plymouth_Colony_map.svg

Founded by a group of English Puritan Separatists (initially known as the Brownist Emigration) who came to be known as the Pilgrims, it was the second successful colony to be founded by the English in America after Jamestown in Virginia, and it was the first permanent English settlement in the New England region

The colony established a treaty with Wampanoag Chief Massasoit which helped to ensure its success; in this, they were aided by Squanto, a member of the Patuxet tribe. Plymouth played a central role in King Philip's War (1675–1678), one of several Indian Wars, but the colony was ultimately merged with the Massachusetts Bay Colony and other territories in 1691 to form the Province of Massachusetts Bay

Despite the colony's relatively short existence, Plymouth holds a special role in American history. Most of the citizens of Plymouth were fleeing religious persecution and searching for a place to worship as they saw fit, rather than being entrepreneurs like many of the settlers of Jamestown in Virginia. The social and legal systems of the colony became closely tied to their religious beliefs, as well as to English custom. Many of the people and events surrounding Plymouth Colony have become part of American folklore, including the American tradition of Thanksgiving and the monument of Plymouth Rock

Buried in the cemetery at Burial Hill, which is close to the Coles Hill Burial-ground

The Burial Hill location is on Leyden Street at the top of the hill overlooking Plymouth Rock, and is close to the Coles Hill Burial Ground

Our Pilgrim ancestors' first winter in the Plymouth colony proved deadly, with forty-five of the 102 Mayflower passengers dying of sickness in the winter of 1620-21. The colonists were afraid of burying the dead openly, as it could have alerted the Indians as to how weak the colony was and possibly provoke an attack. In order to prevent this, they buried their dead in secrecy at Cole's Hill in Plymouth

After rain storms had washed many of the remains out of the hill, it was decided in 1921 that the remains should be excavated and placed into a stone Sarcophagus monument that sits at the top of the hill overlooking the harbor

The inscription reads:

"Here under cover of darkness the fast dwindling company laid their dead, leveling the earth above them lest the Indians should learn how many were their graves. Reader, history records no nobler venture for faith and freedom than that of this pilgrim band. In weariness and painfulness in watchings often in hunger and cold, they laid the foundations of a state wherein every man through countless ages should have liberty to worship God in his own way. May their example inspire thee to do thy part in perpetuating and spreading the lofty ideals of our Republic throughout the world."

The people entombed in the Sarcophagus are described in the "place details media" and here:

The Province of Massachusetts Bay, British Colonial America (North America)

The Province of Massachusetts Bay (originally named "The Charter of William and Mary") was a British settlement in North America that existed from 1691–1780; it was formed from the merging of the Massachusetts Bay Colony (established by King Charles I in 1628) and the Plymouth Colony (formed in 1620) as a charter, which expanded the original colony that was a part of The Plymouth Colony (West of the Cape Cod Bay) that started in 1620

The Province of Maine, Martha's Vineyard, Nantucket, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick were rechartered on October 7, 1691 by William III and Mary II, the joint monarchs of the kingdoms of England, Scotland, and Ireland. The charter took effect on May 14, 1692

It was the largest English settlement in New England, influential in the colonization of the region and in the development of what would become the United States; the colony's borders with neighboring provinces were adjusted during the provincial period and gave the Crown the power to appoint the Governor, rather than electing them

The name Massachusetts is from the Massachusett Indians, an Algonquian tribe. It has been translated as "at the great hill", "at the place of large hills", or "at the range of hills", with reference to the Blue Hills and to Great Blue Hill in particular

It became one of the thirteen original states of the United States in 1776, evolving to the Commonwealth of Massachusetts

More details

Colonial settlement of the shores of Massachusetts Bay began in 1620 with the founding of the Plymouth Colony on the western coast of the Cape Cod Bay. Other attempts at colonization took place throughout the 1620s, but expansion of English settlements only began on a large scale with the founding of the Massachusetts Bay Colony in 1628 and the arrival of the first large group of Puritan settlers in 1630

The territory (nominally administered by the colony) covered much of central New England, including portions of Massachusetts, Maine, New Hampshire, and Connecticut. Territory claimed (but never administered by the colonial government) extended as far west as the Pacific Ocean. The Dutch colony of New Netherland disputed many of these claims, arguing that they held rights to land beyond Rhode Island up to the western side of Cape Cod Bay, under the jurisdiction of the Plymouth Colony at the time

The colony was founded by the owners of the Massachusetts Bay Company, which included investors in the failed Dorchester Company which had established a short-lived settlement on Cape Ann in 1623. The colony became economically successful, with about 20,000 people migrating to New England in the 1630s and engaging in trade with England and the West Indies. A shortage of hard currency prompted it to establish a mint in 1652 and political differences with England after the English Restoration led to the revocation of the colonial charter in 1684

The colonists initially had good relationships with the local Indian populations, but frictions developed which ultimately led to the Pequot War (1636–38) and then to King Philip's War (1675–78), which was very costly to the colonists of New England, putting a halt to expansion for several years. Most of the Indians in southern New England made peace treaties with the colonists, apart from the Pequot tribe, whose survivors were largely absorbed into the Narragansett and Mohegan tribes following the Pequot War

Over the first ten years from its founding, a major migration of Puritans moved to the area, leading to the founding of a number of new colonies in New England. By the 1680s, the number of New England colonies had stabilized at five; the Connecticut Colony, the Colony of Rhode Island and Providence Plantations, and the Province of New Hampshire all bordered the area surrounding Massachusetts Bay and Plymouth. Massachusetts Bay, however, was the most populous and economically successful, hosting a sizable merchant fleet and engaging in trade with England and the West Indies

Governance of the colony was dominated by a small group, strongly influenced by the Puritan religious leaders. Its governors were elected, and the electorate was limited to freemen who had been examined for their religious views and formally admitted to the local church. As a consequence, the colonial leadership exhibited intolerance to other religious views, including Anglican, Quaker, and Baptist theologies

Massachusetts and Plymouth were both somewhat politically independent from England in their early days, but this situation changed after the restoration of Charles II to the English throne in 1660. Charles sought closer oversight of the colonies, and he tried to introduce and enforce economic control over their activities. The Navigation Acts passed in the 1660s were widely disliked in Massachusetts, where merchants often found themselves trapped and at odds with the rules. However, many colonial governments did not enforce the acts themselves, particularly Massachusetts, and tensions grew when Charles revoked the first Massachusetts Charter in 1684. Sir William Phips arrived in 1692 bearing the charter and formally took charge of the new province

In 1686, Charles II's successor, King James II established "The Dominion of New England" to bring all of the New England colonies (the British territories from Delaware Bay to Penobscot Bay) under firmer crown control, a single political unit. The dominion governor, Sir Edmund Andros was highly unpopular in the colonies, but he was especially hated in Massachusetts where he angered virtually everyone by rigidly enforcing the Navigation Acts, vacating land titles, appropriating a Puritan meeting house as a site to host services for the Church of England, and restricting town meetings, among other sundry complaints

The dominion collapsed after 2 years with the "Glorious Revolution" of 1688 and deposed James; whereupon the Massachusetts political leaders rose up against Andros, arresting him and other English authorities in April 1689. The Massachusetts Bay Colony reverted to rule under the revoked charter until 1691, when a new charter was issued for the Province of Massachusetts Bay that combined the Massachusetts Bay territories with those of the Plymouth Colony and proprietary holdings on Nantucket and Martha's Vineyard

The Plymouth colony never had a royal charter, so its governance had always been on a somewhat precarious footing. The Massachusetts colonial government was re-established but it no longer had a valid charter, and some opponents of the old Puritan rule refused to pay taxes and engaged in other forms of protest

Provincial agents traveled to London where Increase Mather was representing the old colony leaders, and he petitioned new rulers William III and Mary II to restore the old colonial charter. King William refused, however, when he learned that this might result in a return to the religious rule. Instead, the Lords of Trade combined the colonies of Plymouth and Massachusetts Bay into the Province of Massachusetts Bay. They issued a charter for the Province on October 7, 1691, and appointed Sir William Phips as its governor

Tisbury is a town in Dukes County in The Province of Massachusetts Bay of British Colonial America and is located on Martha's Vineyard and Vineyard Haven; it is the main village/town center of Tisbury; both names are used interchangeably

Tisbury was incorporated within the Commonwealth of Massachusetts in 1671 and remains the legal name of the town to this day. However, the port and harbor have had varying names. "Holmes Hole" was one of the first names of the port within the town of Tisbury. This name was later changed to "Vineyard Haven", which is the official post office name for the community. To residents of Martha's Vineyard, "Vineyard Haven" is by far the more common usage, although residents recognize Tisbury as the town's legal name

Vineyard Haven in Tisbury is the main port of entrance to Martha's Vineyard and is the only operational port on the island during most of the year

The English immigrants had settled into the area in 1643, originally naming their settlement as New Meadows. Tradition has long held that the local native Americans (the Agawam tribe) had called the place "Shenewemedy," meaning "the pleasant place by the flowing waters" but more recent historians now believe that Shenewemedy was how the Agawam pronounced New Meadows, rather than a word in their own language

The General Court of Massachusetts renamed the place as Topsfield in 1648, undoubtedly named after Toppesfield, England, a small parish in the county of Essex, north of London.

At the BMH Royal Herbert Hospital in Greenwich
The hospital Don transferred to in 1976 was BMH Woolwich for orthopedic repairs to his elbows, spending several months there in early 1977; it was actually the Royal Herbert Hospital in southeast London. It was on the south side of Woolwich Common which is on the western slopes of Shooter's Hill in the Royal Borough of Greenwich

The Herbert Hospital (renamed in 1900 as the Royal Herbert Hospital) was built as a restorative facility for British veterans of the Crimean War, and remained a military hospital until it was closed in 1977; the hospital had become the Army's main orthopedic centre and contained the Army schools for physiotherapy, x-rays, and for medical clerks' and nurses' preliminary training

Opposite the hospital, the Royal Army Medical Corps Officers' Mess was built in 1909; renamed Victoria House, it was sold by the Ministry of Defence in 2013

The hospital became derelict after a period of time, and demolition was thought likely… it was preserved as a Grade-II listed building in the Woolwich Common Conservation Area until 1990, when the empty and disused site was purchased by a property developer and developed into 228 luxurious flats and apartments called the Royal Herbert Pavilions. Completed in 1995, today's site incorporates a leisure club, private bar, tennis courts, swimming pool and outdoor nature reserve

Gidea (Giddy) Hall

British History Online has this record of the various owners and residents:

The manor of GIDEA HALL, from which the modern Gidea Park is named, laid north-east of Romford town; it was destroyed in 1930

In 1250/1251 the daughter of Simon of Gidea Hall (Gidiehulle) held two tenements in the manor of Havering, of 1 virgate and ¼ virgate respectively. Since these were large virgates her total holdings were probably about 150 acres

Around 1355, Sir John of Havering held Gidea Hall, East House, in Romford, and other lands, comprising a total of 501 acres. The Gidea Hall section of this estate had previously belonged to John of Abbenach

In 1376 Gidea Hall and East House were held by William Baldwin, saddler of London, to whom they had been granted by Robert of Havering

Robert Chichele, a London merchant, and brother of Henry Chichele, later archbishop of Canterbury, was holding Gidea Hall in 1412. By then the estate also included the manor of Bedfords

In 1441 it was held by Robert Saltmarsh and his wife Christine who sold it in 1452 to (Sir) Thomas Cooke (d. 1478), a London draper who was lord mayor in 1462. He also bought the manor of Bedfords and Earls in Havering, and that of Redden Court in Hornchurch. During an eventful career he was twice imprisoned, but he retained the estate, which descended in his family until the 17th century. The Cookes became the leading local gentry; notable among them was Sir Anthony Cooke (d. 1576), tutor to Edward VI and father-in-law of Lord Burghley

Cilicia
Cilicia was an early Roman province, located on what is today the southern Mediterranean coast of Turkey

Cilicia was annexed to the Roman Republic in 64 BC by Pompey, as a consequence of his military presence in the east, after pursuing victory in the Third Mithridatic War

It was subdivided by Diocletian in around 297, and it remained under Roman rule for several centuries, until falling to the Islamic conquests.

The Romans built a temple near Uley at West Hill on the site of an earlier prehistoric shrine

Many discoveries were made following the laying of a water-main pipe there in 1976, including numerous Roman writing tablets or lead-curse tablets from the temple area. These writing tablets appear often to relate to theft, and here the mention of animals and farm implements is a regular theme. There is an ongoing online project to catalogue all those found at West Hill

Other remains from this temple, including a fine stone head of Mercury, can now be seen in the British Museum. There were significant Roman villas nearby at Frocester, Kingscote, and Woodchester, and there is a little-known Roman villa beneath Cam Peak on the road into Dursley, the central area

St Giles's Church near the village green was designed by the 19th-century architect Samuel Sanders Teulon. His building replaced an earlier church dating back to Norman times, which had in its turn replaced a Saxon church. The nearby church of the Holy Cross at Owlpen also has Saxon origins: the church there was rebuilt in 1828 by Samuel Manning and enlarged and decorated in 1876 by James Piers St Aubyn. There were also non-conformist chapels at South St and Whitecourt until the early 1970s

Vestfold is currently a county in Norway, bordering Buskerud and Telemark, located west of the Oslofjord, as the name indicates. It includes many smaller, but well-known towns in Norway, such as Larvik, Sandefjord, Tønsberg and Horten; these towns run from Oslo in an almost constant belt of urban areas along the coast, ending in Grenland in neighboring region Telemark

Warton is a village and civil parish in the City of Lancaster in north Lancashire in the north-west of England, close to the boundary with Cumbria. It is a village steeped in history; its earliest recording as a settlement is made in Domesday Book written in 1086. The nearest town to Warton is Carnforth, which was originally part of Warton parish

The exact origins of St Oswald's Church (formerly Holy Trinity) and its associated parish are unknown. It is believed that the church in this parish was established well before the Norman Conquest in 1066. The oldest portion of the church is the south wall which is of 14th-century origin, though the earliest recorded incumbent dates from 1190

By the start of the 13th Century, Warton had flourished into an important staging post on the route north to Carlisle, Northumbria and Scotland. So much so, it was granted a charter for a Wednesday market, gallows and ordeal pit in 1200 during the reign of King John. The grant of borough status by the town's lord, the baron of Kendal, later in the thirteenth century confirmed the economic importance of Warton at that period

The oldest surviving architecture other than the church is the ruined rectory, built around 1267; records exist of work being carried out on the rectory until 1332. The ruins are in good condition with the gables surviving to almost their original height (around 30 ft). Now in the care of English Heritage, it is a rare survival of a large 14th-century stone house with great hall and chambers. It served as a residence and courthouse for the wealthy and powerful rectors of Warton

The village of Winterborne Whitechurch (also spelled as "Whitchurch" and as "Winterbourne") that is also a civil parish is in central Dorset, England

It is situated in the Winterbourne valley on the A354 road (in the Dorset Downs), 5 miles (8.0 km) south-west of Blandford Forum

Evidence of prehistoric human activity in the parish consists of 7 barrows and a linear dyke known as Combs Ditch; the dyke was probably a boundary in the Iron Age but was subsequently modified until it had a more defensive purpose by the end of the Roman occupation. One of the barrows near the dyke was excavated in 1864; one cremation and four inhumations (see below) were found, as well as crude arrowheads within a bucket urn. There used to be at least five other barrows, but these have been destroyed by more recent human activity

An "inhumation" is a burial or interment, as a ritual act with placing a dead person or animal, sometimes with objects, into the ground. This is accomplished by excavating a pit or trench, placing the deceased and objects in it, and covering it over. Humans have been burying their dead for at least 100,000 years. Burial is often seen as indicating respect for the dead. It has been used to prevent the odor of decay, to give family members closure and prevent them from witnessing the decomposition of their loved ones, and in many cultures it has been seen as a necessary step for the deceased to enter the afterlife or to give back to the cycle of life

In 1086 in the Domesday Book, Winterborne Whitechurch was recorded as "Wintreborne;" it had 3 households, 1.5 ploughlands and 6 acres (2.4 ha) of meadow. It was in the hundred of Combsditch, and the lord and tenant-in-chief was Milton Abbey

The parish church, dedicated to St Mary, has a chancel dating to around 1200, a 14th-century crossing and 15th-century south chapel and central tower. The nave was rebuilt in 1844 by Benjamin Ferrey, who also added a south porch and north and south aisles. Until 1933 the church and the western part of the village formed part of neighboring Milton Abbas parish, resulting in Winterborne Whitechurch church standing outside its own parish

> Discovery of a baptismal fact (for Alfred Sampson Shave) shared the location as "Wesley-Methodist Chapel"… this led to the changes from St. Mary to one of either

The Methodist church was closed in 1971 and sold in 1972 because of the poor condition of the church, and Church services were continued in the Parish Church. The church was originally in the Dorchester Methodist Circuit but was transferred in 1963. In 1990 the church was transferred to the Wimborne Minster Circuit

Woburn, Middlesex County, The Colony of Massachusetts Bay, British Colonial America (North America) (42° 28' 45.01" N, 71° 9' 10.01" W)
Woburn is a city in Middlesex County, located 9 miles north of Boston; it was first settled in 1640 near Horn Pond, a primary source of the Mystic River, and was officially incorporated in 1642. At that time the area included present day towns of Woburn, Winchester, Burlington, and parts of Stoneham and Wilmington. In 1740 Wilmington separated from Woburn. In 1799 Burlington separated from Woburn; in 1850 Winchester did so, too

Woburn got its name from Woburn in Bedfordshire, England. Woburn played host to the first religious ordination in the Americas on Nov. 22, 1642. Rev. Thomas Carter was sworn in by many of the most prominent men of New England including John Cotton, minister of the First Church of Boston, Richard Mather minister of the First Church of Dorchester, and Capt. Edward Johnson co-founder of the church and town of Woburn. Johnson is regarded as "the father of Woburn." He served as the first town clerk, represented the town in the Massachusetts General Court, made the first map of Massachusetts, and wrote the first history of the colony

The first organizational Town Meeting was held on April 13, 1644 and the first town officers were chosen. Town Selectmen were Edward Johnson, Edward Convers, John Mousall, William Learned, Ezekiel Richardson, Samuel Richardson and James Thompson. William Learned was also selected as Constable. Michael Bacon, Ralph Hill, Thomas Richardson were chosen as Surveyors of Highways. (The History of Woburn, 1868)

Deacon Edward Convers was also one of the founders of Woburn. He was one of its first selectmen, and built the first house and first mill in Woburn. He was very active in town affairs and was a large landowner, miller and surveyor

Jerusalem is an ancient Middle Eastern city located on a plateau in the Judaean Mountains between the Mediterranean and the Dead Sea; it is today the capital of Israel and the center of many religions

During its long history, Jerusalem has been destroyed at least twice, besieged 23 times, captured and recaptured 44 times, and attacked 52 times. As one of the oldest cities in the world, it is today considered holy to each of the three major Abrahamic religions—Judaism, Christianity, and Islam. Both Israel and the Palestinian Authority claim Jerusalem as their capital, as Israel maintains its primary governmental institutions there and the State of Palestine ultimately foresees it as its seat of power; however, neither claim is widely recognized internationally

Variations of the name abound, both linguistic and historical; lists have been compiled of 72 different names in Jewish scripture. Today, Jerusalem is called "Yerushalayim" in Hebrew and "Al-Quds" in Arabic. Its earliest form is "Urusalim" which is a Sumero-Akkadian name that is variously etymologised to mean "foundation of [by] the god Shalim" (from West Semitic 'to found, to lay a cornerstone'), and Shalim, the Canaanite god of the setting sun and the nether world, as well as of health and perfection

Long an object of veneration and conflict, the holy city of Jerusalem has been governed, both as a provincial town and a national capital, by an extended series of dynasties and states. In the early 20th century the city, along with all of historic Palestine, became the focus of the competing national aspirations of Zionists and Palestinian Arabs. This struggle often erupted in violence. The United Nations (UN) attempted to declare the city a corpus separatum (Latin: "separate entity")-and, thus, avert further conflict-but the first Arab-Israeli war in 1948, left Jerusalem divided into Israeli (west Jerusalem) and Jordanian (east Jerusalem) sectors. The following year Israel declared the city its capital. During the Six-Day War of 1967, the Jewish state occupied the Jordanian sector and shortly thereafter expanded the city boundaries-thereby annexing some areas of the West Bank previously held by the Jordanians-and extended its jurisdiction over the unified city. Although Israel's actions were repeatedly condemned by the UN and other bodies, Israel reaffirmed Jerusalem's standing as its capital by promulgating a special law in 1980. The status of the city remained a central issue in the dispute between Israel and the Palestinian Arabs, who claim east Jerusalem as the capital of a future Palestinian state

The earliest traces of human settlement in the city area, found on a hill to the southeast, are from the late Chalcolithic Period (the Copper Age) and Early Bronze Age (c. 3000 BC). Excavations have revealed that a settlement existed on a site south of the Temple Mount, and a massive town wall was found just above the Gihon Spring, which determined the location of the ancient settlement

The name is probably of western Semitic origin and apparently means "Foundation of Shalem (God)." The city and its earliest rulers, the Egyptians, are mentioned in the Egyptian Execration Texts (c. 1900–1800 BC) and again in the 14th-century Tell el-Amarna correspondence, which contains a message from the city's ruler, Abdi-Kheba, requiring his sovereign's help against the invading Hapiru (Habiru, Apiru)

A biblical narrative mentions the meeting of the Canaanite Melchizedek, said to be king of Salem (Jerusalem), with the Hebrew patriarch Abraham. A later episode in the biblical text mentions another king, Adonizedek, who headed an Amorite coalition and was vanquished by Joshua

According to biblical accounts, Jerusalem, on the frontier of Benjamin and Judah and inhabited by a mixed population described as Jebusites, was captured by David, founder of the joint kingdom of Israel and Judah, and the city became the Jewish kingdom's capital. This has been dated to about 1000 BC. David's successor, King Solomon, extended the city and built his Temple on the threshing floor of Araunah (Ornan) the Jebusite. Thus Jerusalem became the place of the royal palace and the sacred site of a monotheistic religion

On King Solomon's death, the northern tribes seceded and in bout 930 BC the Egyptian pharaoh Sheshonk I sacked the city, to be followed by the Philistines and Arabians in 850 BC and Joash of Israel in 786 BC. After Hezekiah became king of Judah, he built new fortifications and an underground tunnel, which brought water from Gihon Spring to the Pool of Siloam inside the city, but he succumbed to the might of Sennacherib of Assyria, who in 701 BC forced payment of a heavy tribute

In 612 BC Assyria yielded its primacy to Babylon. Eight years later Jerusalem was despoiled, and its king was deported to Babylon

In 587/586 BC the city and Temple were completely destroyed by Nebuchadrezzar II (Nebuchadnezzar), and the Hebrew captivity began. It ended in 538 BC when Cyrus II (the Great) of Persia, who had overcome Babylon, permitted the Jews, led by Zerubbabel, of the Davidic house, to return to Jerusalem. The Temple was restored (515 BC) despite Samaritan opposition, and the city became the centre of the new statehood. Its position was strengthened when Nehemiah (c. 444 BC) restored its fortifications

Hellenistic and Hasmonean periods
With the coming of Alexander the Great and his victory at Issus in 333 BC, Jerusalem fell under Greek influence. After Alexander's death, Palestine fell to the share of his marshal Ptolemy I Soter, son of Lagus, who had occupied Egypt and had made Alexandria his capital. In the year 198 BC Jerusalem was acquired by the northern dynasty, descended from Seleucus I Nicator, another of Alexander's marshals, which ruled from Antioch (now in Turkey)

The growth of Greek influence (pagan) affronted the orthodox Jews, whose hostility burst into armed rebellion in 167 BC after the Seleucid Antiochus IV Epiphanes deliberately desecrated the Temple. The revolt was led by Mattathias, son of Hasmoneus (Hasmon), and was carried on by his son Judas, known as the Maccabee (Maccabeus). The Hasmoneans succeeded in expelling the Seleucids, and Jerusalem regained its position as the capital of an independent state ruled by the priestly Hasmonean dynasty

Žeden Ancient Area, Macedonia, Europe
Žeden is a place from biblical times and is possibly imaginary… Eden is a part of this area, as are Cainan & Shulon, both of which are in the Garden of Eden, East of Eden… "Eden" and "East of Eden" are biblical locations in the Land of Nod, mentioned in the Hebrew Bible (Book of Genesis), which is located "on the east of Eden"

Cain was exiled here by God after Cain murdered his brother Abel, according to Genesis 4:16:
And Cain went out from the presence of the LORD, and dwelt in the land of Nod, on the east of Eden

"Nod" is the Hebrew root of the verb "to wander," therefore to dwell in the land of Nod is usually taken to mean that one takes up a wandering life

A source (sadly lost) reported that Žeden was at that time near the north-western head of the Persian Gulf, in southern Mesopotamia (now Iraq) where the Tigris and Euphrates rivers run into the sea

Scanning Google maps shows the area as mostly desert between the 2 rivers; the Al-Rashid Mosque is nearby but likely not connected to this place
